Mr. Edison has Succeeded

Real Music Made A Universal Possession Through His Phonograph

The president of the United States has said that Mr. Edison seems to be "in the special confidence of nature, herself."

Yes, it is true that Mr. Edison's great genius has conquered difficulties which have baffled all others. He has succeeded where others have failed.

All eyes are turned to him now as he labors behind the secret doors of his laboratory in the service of his government. "Will he succeed?" is the question on the tongue and in the heart of every person.

While the civilized world is waiting for this latest product of his master brain, it is drawing joy from his many other inventions.

It may be truly said that the chief of these is his wonderful phonograph. At least, in his own words, it is his pet and hobby.

His wonderful phonograph is not the talking machine that all have learned to know, and many to dislike. It is a musical instrument which brings you music which is living and breathing, that is free from that artificial and mechanical quality through which everyone recognizes the talking machine.

Yes, the genius of the master inventor has given us all true music. And what is more, he has made every home, which owns one of his wonderful musical instruments, a much happier home. He has given it something that will bring sunshine to all who dwell within its walls. He has made every life within this home fuller and more complete.

Music, in days gone by, was a hard thing to have. It meant years of training and the sacrifice of much time and money. But, thanks to Mr. Edison, this is no longer true. For a few paltry dollars, one may have this great musical instrument of his which makes the world of genuine music at the finger tips of every human being.

Certain enterprising business men have gone even further to put Mr. Edison's musical instrument into every home. They have made offers by which anyone may own the New Edison by the payment of only a few small monthly instalments which are scarcely large enough to be missed. This is so remarkable an offer that we cannot do otherwise than to advise everyone of our readers to become familiar with it. It means so much to become an owner of Mr. Edison's great, ev musical instrument that everyone should at least be familiar with the remarkably easy way in which it may be secured. Our readers may secure particulars of this offer by writing to Mr. F. K. Babson, Edison Phonograph Distributor, 355 Portage Avenue, Winnipeg, Manitoba, who will send full details without obligation as well as a new and interesting catalog of new Edison instruments.

—The Editor.
