HAMILTON,

The heart has many a dwelling spot On Lifetime's pilgrim way, In many a land where human lot Leads human foot to stray; But time, nor change, can e'er efface This truth where'er we foam-That the heart has many a dwelling place, But only once a home. The cet may for a palace change, By Fortune's golden spell ;

But this can ne'er our love estrange From what the past can tell ; That truth, which memory loves to trace,

Poetry.

THE HOME OF THE HEART.

Still lives beneath the dome That the heart has many a dwelling place, But only once a home.

Young filial love, all given by Time To be our help and stay. With sunny beam and voiceful chime May light and cheer our way :

But from the past each voice and face, Dear, sacred, proofs will come-That the heart has many a dwelling place,

But only once a home.

About 12,000 had assembled in a Park, and every thing was passing off peaceably till towards evening they were assailed by a gang of rowdies, who were armed with guns, pistols, swords, &c.; they commenced without provocation, to insult the females, overthrow the refreshment tables, and destroy the property of the venders. Buildings were burned, and 49 or 50 robberies were committed, principally on females, who were waylaid, and made to deliver up their money, rings, &c. The affray was not quelled until late in the evening. - Canada

TERRIBLE EARTHQUAKE IN CHILI. An awful earthquake, which nearly swallowed up Valparaiso, occurred on the 3rd of April last. The first shock, which was the severest one, and which caused the falling of many buildings, and the destruction of much property, occurred about six o'clock on the morning of the 2nd, but occa-sional shocks, of greater or less severity, were folt for the successfung ten days, doing more or less damage.

damsge. On the 2nd of April, at 61 A. M., Valparaiso was visited by one of them calamities so frequent in territory. The motion of the earth was observed to be of less violence in some parts than others, not a hun-dred yards distant, so much so, that old and de-cayed houses stood the shock better, in some parts, than newly and strongly erected edifices; and these houses in the structure of which most timber has been employed, remained almost sound. During the eventful fifteen seconds, the house rocked to and fro like so many vessels at sea. rocked to and fro like so many vessels at sea. Not a breeze of air was perceptible during the whole of he day, and slighter shocks continued at 6.46 minutes, 6.56 minutes, 8.55 minutes, 10.55 minutes, and have continued ever since, of more or less duration; and even at this moment of writing, on the 7th instant, at 11 p. M., a short but severe motion made the inhabitants rush out of their houses. The houses in the port, where the greater part of the commercial establishments kept their offi-ces, have, comparatively speaking, suffered but little, being built on a solid, rocky foundation; and we can only hear of one of Gen Herrera's houses, occupied by Messrs Gibbs & Co., being in a dan-gerous state. specially for that purples by the fate-payers, after much discussion was defeated by a vote of 49 to 139. The object of transportation to Van Die-man's Land has also occupied the attention of the Gövernment. The inhabitants of that colouy, if appears, are as excited in regard to this constant transmission of taint amounts theore the Constant visited by one of these calamities so irequent in volcanic countries. A severe trembling of the earth, of 15 seconds' duration, prolonged by less violent after-shecks to two minutes, which two minutes appeared as so many hours to those whose lives and property were endangered, has in so short a time destroyed several hundred buildings, and made a number of persons houseless. It is connective to the violette The Church Union—This Society is making rapid advances in its organization; each day bringing intelligence of the for-mation of Branches in various parts of the Province. The proceedings at many of the meetings were most interesting and the clergy, the merchants, and the leading free people in the colony; and even the women of Van Dieman's Land have latelymemorialized the Queen on the subject. Many respectable persons have left the colony, and a feeling of deadly hestility is said to be rising between the free and the convict colonists. There is little doubt that the griovance of the colonists will soon be removed.

IRELAND.

Emigration from Ulster. - The Fermanagh Re-Emigration from Ulster.— The Fermanagh Re-porter thus refers to the progress of emigration in the North of Ireland :— "From every part of the country the people are flying, as if before the surg-ing sweep of another deluge. Every day the differ-ent conveyances that pass through Enniskillon are loaded with exiles—those who are breaking their hearts to save their lives. Whole families are hearts to save their lives. Whole families are moving away together under the desperate incan-tation of 'No hope here.' What will become of the country when those able to stay are going— the strength and hope of the land departing, and those remaining, so many of them, burdens on the country ? And when this wish to fly is so strong in Ulster, what must be the feeling in the dark parts of Ireland, that are full of the habitations of cruelty ? There must be an end to this flying, and where will the end be ?" FRANCE.

FRANCE. In Paris, the revision of the Constitution creates

In Paris, the revision of the Constitution creates a great deal of agitation, but, with the exception of the Legitimists, who declare openly for the re-storation of the Monarchy, and whose cry is en avant, all the others appear to hesitate. The most remarkable change which has taken place in the political atmosphere of France is the bold stand taken by the Legitimists in favor of the cause of Henry V. There is no longer any con-cealment about the matter. They frankly proclaim that they look to a restoration of the monarchy. called in about the matter. They frankly proclaim that they look to a restoration of the monarchy, and that in seeking for a total revision of the Constitution, their object is to alter its republican spirit, and to pave the way for the re-establishment of the ancient line of kings. M. de Falloux, in a remarkable speech in the club of the Rue de Rivoli, goes further, for he abjures all adjourn-ment, boasts of the unhoped for success of the party during the last three years—of the educa-tion law—of the expedition to Rome—and of the reconciliation of parties who had been enemies for eighteen years—all measures so favorable to the cause, that he brings them forward as showing that the hand of Providence is on their side; and having thus strongly expressed his feelings and Frightful Accident at Seville.—The Madrid Epoca of the 15th inst., quotes a letter from Se-ville, announcing that a frightful catastrophe had occurred in the garden of the Duke de Montpen-sier, at Alcala del Rio. The prince had caused a steam engine to be placed in it for its irrigation, and the 10th inst. was fixed for its trial. His Barrel Michaese could not assist at the operation and the 10th inst. was fixed for its trial. His Royal Highness could not assist at the operation as he intended, having been obliged to repair on that day to Villamaurique. As the boiler to be used for the experiment was not new, it was agreed that it should be slowly heated, but, either from neglect or imprudence on the part of the engineer, the boiler exploded, and overthrew the building, burying under its ruins sixty or seventy persone assisting at the experiment as operatives persons, assisting at the experiment as operatives or mere spectators. M. Latour, secretary of the Duke, on hearing of the accident, immediately Duke, on Duke, on hearing of the accuent, ininetatory repaired to the spot, accompanied by the physician in attendance at the palace.
