value he has given the patient, but he especis to prove his worth and show positive and satisfactory results before he asks for the fee. So, should he fail to cure the case, the patient loses nothing, while the doctor, when he cures the patient, has given him what is worth much more than money—he has given him his health back. Lr. # BLOTTED OUT

By CAROL MURRAY

Copyright, 1905, by R. B. McClure amanamamamama (

They were a rough lot of men under the shadow of Diamond hill-miners, teamsters, prospectors, traders and cattennisters, prospectors, traders and cat-themen—but when old John Dyer, one of the mine bosses, brought his daugh-ter Kate from civilization to live with him there and keep his humble cabin he had faith in that chivalry that has always made the western man pespect the other sex. He know that she would have many admirers and that there would be quarrels on her account, but he was a widower and she motherless, and he hoped he was doing what was best.

The cabin, like the rude and straggling village, was backed by the grim mountain, while along its front as far as human eye could reach there glit-tered the white sands of the Mojave desert. Here and there out on that dreary waste were patches of ugly cacti, and intuition told the girl as her eyes searched the desert for the first time that out there under the blazing sun the rattlesnake basked and the lizard glided swiftly over the bones of men and animals. The desert was not always at peace. its surface resembling a placid lake. Now and then a wind, born up in the gulches of the mountain, came down and went sweeping across the sands, and then the spectator saw great clouds of dust as the flinty particles were caught up and driven here and there to cut and gash and wound whatever lived. The sands never swept in from the desert, but always were driven the other way. Had it not been so Diamond mine and the town around it could not have been.

The coming of the girl among the thousand men was an event. There were a few old women there—cooks and laundresses—but here was a girl, a handsome young girl. Her influence was felt almost immediately. The mine manager said that more soap, combs, handkerchiefs and looking glasses were called for from the company store in a week than were bought pany store in a week than were bought during the preceding three months.

At least 800 of the thousand men determined on an introduction at once, but when it came to the point, and even after three months had passed, there were not a dozen callers at the cabin. A month or two lates it was said that only two of the dater it was said that only two of the dozen stood a chance. By "chance" they meant marriage. It never occurred to any of them that a girl might have come among them without falling in love and manufacture are at their ing in love and marrying one of their

It was strange that among Kate's earliest and most persistent admirers was Pedro Diaz, a full blooded Mexican. He had charge of the company's transportation, and he managed through the father to force an introduction. He was kindly received by the girl, but no more. He was taleasted by the he was kindly received by the girl, but no more. He was tolerated by the father, but there was no welcome for him. Pedro was a swaggerer. He was an egotist. He thought he was in love, and once having made up his mind to this he was ready to maintain what he called his right by fair means or

The thousand men said that Pedro's rival was Tommy Britt, the keeper of rival was Tommy Britt, the keeper of the company's store. He was an Amer-ican, young, fair looking, and down on the books to be promoted for his en-ergy, ambition and integrity. Perhaps he admired, as all others did, but he had never asked himself if he was in had never asked himself if he was in week to the cabin.

week to the cabin.

There came a day whon Pedro Diaz made up his mind to know his fate.
He chose an hour when he knew the giri would be alone, and he dressed in his best and knocked on the cabin door. He believed himself irresistible, and he smiled and smirked and offered his love. There was a moment of astonishment, and he found himself rejected. The girl tempered her refusal as much as possible. It was her first offer, but womanly instinct told her to soften the blow even though the man was obnoxious to her.

"What! You refuse Pedro Diaz!" exclaimed the man in reply. "You re-fuse me-me, who am worth $5,000 and could marry any senorita in my own country! Do you quite understand me?"

"I have no love for you," replied the

"But that makes no difference. You shall love me later on. I am Pedro Diaz. It is the first time I ever did a woman the honor of asking her to

The girl's reply was a firm one, and The girl's reply was a firm one, and Pedro flung himself out of the cabin with auger raging in his heart. He had been snubbed, humiliated, made a fool of. There was a man in the case, of course, and it could be none other than the storekeeper. Whoever opposed Pedro Diaz in any of his cherished schemes must die. He was not five minutes deciding on the death of Britt. That morning the young man had ridden away across the desert, a stretch of twenty long, hot miles, to strike the railroad on the other side and order further supplies by telegraph. The ride was twenty miles over and twenty miles back. He would cover the distance in a day, but it would be late in the evening when he returned.

"I will meet and kill him as he returns," decided Pedro, and when darkness fell he eluded observation as much as possible and rode out on the desert. There was no trail across the sands. He who would hold a straight course must depend upon the compass, and he must consult it often. There was fair starlight—light enough to see his rival many rods away. The sky was clear of those scudding clouds which might be taken as warnings that the whirlwinds were being born in the cold air of the gulches, and no noise came from the mountain except the whispers of the pines to the cedars.

When Pedro had made five miles straight out from the base he pulled in his horse and sat and waited, his face to the west and his ears alert for the slightest sound. For an hour he waited, and then of a sudden a cold chill struck the back of his neck. He whirled his horse about with an oath on his lips.

"It is the sand storm!" he muttered as he jumped to the ground.

He had a blanket for himself and one for his horse. The animal lay down at the word and suffered his head to be wrapped, and just as the first sharp grains began to fly the man snuggled lown beside the animal and muffled his head and swore.

He had seen a hundred sand storms on that desert. They came with a puff and went the same way. In five minand went the same way. In we minutes he would be up and watching again, but when five minutes had passed the gusts were stronger. At the end of ten they began circling and running across the sands like wraiths. They also dug deep into the sands, and when they met with an obstruc-tion they covered it in. Man and horse were soon in danger of suffocation and had to struggle up to throw off the weight. They were just in time to be caught by a circling breeze and spun around as if they were straws, and when the man was flung on his face at last and covered a foot deep in an instant the horse uttered a neigh of terror and galloped heavily away.

"It will pass, it will pass, and I will have my revenge!" muttered Pedro as he stood up with his back to the blast, but it did not pass.

He was flung this way and that, car-ried along or left half senseless on the sands, and not for a full hour did the wind scream out its goodby to the desert and return to its sleep. Then the surface of the desert was smooth again, and the man who came riding from the love. He found both father and daughter congenial company, and that would have been his excuse had any one both father and daughter could not tell that under his worse's feet lay a human body buried two feet deep. There had been a Pedro asked him why he paid two visits a blotted him out.

It is much easier for a woman to confide in the average man than in the average woman. She knows that the man will respect her confidences and keep them to himself. He is strong, has more experience of the world and can help the woman who needs advice. There is every reason why women should not trust their delicate constitutions in the hands of unskilled persons. It requires a thorough medical education to appreciate and understand the womanly organism. When a woman has ills and pains that she cannot bear—when life seems dark for every woman, she should confide her troubles to a physician of standing in the community, or one who has a national reputation. Certainly it would not be the part of wisdom to confide in an ignorant person without medical education simply because she was a woman. There is every reason why she should write to some great specialist, one who has made the diseases of women a specialty for a third of a century, like Dr. R. V. Pierce, fonnder of the Invalids' Motil and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. All his correspondence is held sacredly confidential, and he gives his advice free and without charge.

So uniformly successful has Dr. Pierce's Faverite Prescription proven in all forms of Female Weakuess, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb, and Leucorrhea, that, after curing the worst cases of these distressing and debilitating aliments, Dr. Pierce now feels fully was assed in offering to pay $500 in cash for any case of these distressing and debilitating aliments, Dr. Pierce now feels fully research of these distressing and debilitating aliments, Dr. Pierce now feels fully research of these distressing and debilitating aliments, Dr. Pierce how feels fully research of these distressing and debilitating aliments, Dr. Pierce diseases which he cannot cure.

Dr. Prierce's Pleasant Pellets should be used with "Favorite Prescription" whenever a lazative is required.

Mrs. Howard Gould has the finest private collection of birds in the United States, in some respects excelling the aviaries at the New York zoological gardens.

In Paris the Countess Boni de Castellane (one of Jay Gould's daughters), who continues to lavish money on all possible objects, is said to display more jewels than the old noble famllies approve.

Adelina Patti's explanation of keeping youthful is that she never loses her temper. Another fact in connec-tion with this great singer is that she owns a parrot, which amuses her by trying to imitate her singing.

CURIOUS CULLINGS.

A curious effect of the recent earthquake in Switzerland was that it lifted sixty-five pipes in the famous organ at Berne out of their holes.

The Abyssinians, even at the court of Emperor Menelik, still eat their meat raw, inserting a strip in the mouth and cutting it off when there is enough for a bite.

A Frenchman who died in Constantinople recently left $45,000 to his nephew, M. d'Albi, who lives in Paris, on condition that the young man cycle to Constantinople to get the legacy.

Plans to build electric street car lines in Peking have aroused a great protest from the natives, who say would be very harmful to the poor, as large number of coolies now make a living by hauling passengers in rickshaws or on wheelbarrows.

NORWAY AND SWEDEN.

The spectacle of a throne going a-begging suggests that possibly the bomb has rendered crowns less popular than they once were.

An alliance between Germany and Sweden would bear a marked resemblance to an alliance between the family cat and a young robin.

Would not the Norway-Sweden dispute be a good one with which to start the proposed international arbitration -compulsory, if necessary?

KEROSENE.

After handling a paint brush, kerosene will remove the sticky feeling better than anything else.

An enameled bathtub or one of zinc can be cleaned in a few moments by rubbing with kerosene. Ironing is smoother and clothes more glossy if a few drops of kerosene are added to the boiled starch. When the kitchen sink is rusty and the set tubs from neglect become coated with accumulations of wash waters,
