ENIGMA.

It is formed like the globe, and 'tis planed in the centre, it commands every tongue, every mouth it will enter, it commands every tongue, every mouth it will enter, it is always in fashion—the first to be old, it departs not from home, yet it seanders abroad, it grows in each kingdom and in every soil, it is fond too of inbor—the partner of tool. It appears in all seasons—belongs to all nations, it presides ever the occan—reigns likewise on shore, it has many connections and worthy relations, it presides every object—it enriches our store, it attend all our actions—directs every omen, it turns one into ten—inter men and loves women, it is seen in the morning—rets brighter in spon, it is this in the sun, 'the it shieses in the moon, it is this in the sun, 'the it shieses in the moon, it is this in the sun, 'the it shieses in the snow, it is allown in the rainbow, likewises in the snow, it is allown in the rainbow, likewises in the snow, it is allown in our bosons whate'er be our lot, it rales in accounts when we balance our coffers, it begots every order, whate'er be our fot, it is not of our reason, and also our hope, it does hange to God—'tis a prop to the Pope, it will peep through each window, and half every door, it edespiese the rich, but is kind to the goor, it aids all our knowledge—our morality too, it lends double service for lover to woo, it is aught with our lessons in all we receive, it is mined with our doctrines in all we believe, It is taught with our besongs in all we receive,

Varieties.

NEVER DESPAIR.

NEVER DESPAIR.

"Where there is a will, there is a way;" and, as no one attempts an impossibility, and therefore will make no stremous effort, until he has the hope of success, the "will" that makes the "way" must fi st be made out of faith in the resources which are placed at our disposal. There must not merely be religious taith, but there must be political faith, commercial faith and faith in ourselves and our talents and capabilities. Despair is the opposite of faith, and under its influence, not only is effort impossible, but life is intolerable. All that is necessary to raise the masses is to give them faith. Let the possibility of their rising become an article of their creed, and, along with it, also, let there be the impression that they may, can, mast, might, could, and should, help themselves, and these auxiliaries will soon set them to work out their domestic, intellectual, civil, political, and religious salvation. What a strange thing it is, that the people should imagine that they can do nothing, when they have the great fact before them, that they do almost every thing that is done in the world. Monarchs do not reel nor spin. Princes, dukes, lords, squires, bishops, and priests, do not build, nor plant, plough nor delve: ladies do not spin, weave, cook, nor wash, in these dave; nearly all the and priests, do not build, nor plant, plough nor delve: ladies do not ppin, weave, cook, nor wash, in these dave; nearly all the valuable labour that is performed is done by the hands of the poor. The greatness of the British empire is a monument erected by the agency of the masses, and attests the almost infinite power of the people. And we might say the same, if we referred to the pyramids or other records of the glory of antiquity; for history, both ancient and modern, both sacred and profane, has every page inscribed with some testimony of the skill and power of the working classes, which ought not to be lost on the mechanics and isbourers of this generations.

Conciseness or Tauth.—No disorders have employed so many quacks as those that have no cure, and no sciences have exercised so many quills as those that have no certainty. Truth lies in a small compass; and, if a well has been assigned has lies in a small compass; and, if a well has been assigned her for a habitation, it is as appropriate from its narrowaess, as its death. Hence it happens that those sciences that are capable of being demonstrated, or that are reducible to the severity of calculation, are never voluminous; for clearness is intimately connected with conciseness, as the lightning, which is the brightest thing, is also the most brief; but, precisely in proportion as certainty vanishes, verbosity abounds. To foretell an eclipse, a man must understand astronomy; or to find out an unknown quantity by a known, he must have a knowledge of calculation; and yet the rydiments that enable us to effect these important things are to be found in a very narrow compass.

The Iriahman's Compliment.—A suddengust of wind took a parasol from the hand of the owner, and a lively Irishman, dropping his had of bricks, caught the parachute. "Faithma'am," said he, "if you were as strong, as you are hand-some, it would not have got away from you." "Which shall I thank you for first, the service or the compliment?" asked the lady, smiling. "Troth, ma'm," said Pat, again touching the place where originally stood the brim of what was once a beaver, "that look of your beautiful eye thanked me for both."

St. our Divergence.—The servant of a Prussian officer, one day met a crony, who inquired of him how he got along with his fiery master, "Oh, excellently," answered the servant; "we live on very friendly terms; every morning we beat each other's coats; the only difference is, he takes his off to be beaten, and I keep mine on."

An Eve to Business.—We are often entertained, says a journal, by the tone of sentiments adopted in advertising a death. There is requently a facetions union of puff and despondency. We will give a specimen of a "death":—Died, on the 11th ult., at the shop in Fleet street, Mr. Ed. Jones, much respected by all who knew and dealt with him. As a man he was similable, as a hatter upright and moderate.—His virtues were beyond all price, and his beaver hats were only twenty-four shiftings each. He has left a widow to deplore his less, and a large stock to be sold sheap for the benefit of his family. He was snatched to the other world in the prime of life, and just as he had concluded an extensive purchase of felfs, which he got so very cheap, that the widow can supply hats at a more reasonable charge than any other house in London. His disconsider family will carry on the business with punctuality."

We were much amused by an incident related the other day:

"A gentleman who had been absent for a considerable time, and who, during his absence, had raised a pretty luxuriant crop of whiskers, monstaches, &c., visited a relative, whose childnardess little girl of five its air years—he was very fond of. The little girl made no demonstration towards saluting him with a kisa, as was usual. 'Why, child,' said the mother, don't you give anothe P——, a kiss!' Why, ma, returned the little girl, with the most perfect simplicity, "I don't see any piace!"

It is extend that thirteen thousand cows are kept in Leader to the little girl.
