STORY OF THE GEORGIA DISASTER

Bravery Shown by Officers and Men After Explosion in Turret

Boston, Mass., July 17.—On board the United States battleship Georgia today Capt. Henry Acree told the Associated Press the story of the disaster on board the vessel on Monday, when she was on the bridge making a run for the practice. "I was taking observations of each ship," he said after she was a mile from the eight inch guns, I saw we were beating the records of other ships of the fleet. On the bridge I could hear the command from the after turret so I knew when the next shot was coming. I heard the shout, 'fire,' but there was not shot, and then I saw men running aft and quickly the fire hose, that is always laid out in readiness when we are firing, was unrolled. I rushed to the after bridge near the turret to see what was the matter. The water was already being poured into the turret, the boatswain and Midshipman Graves Croft led the way for their men with the hose. I tell you, there was courage; no man knew what had happened and no man knew into what danger he might be rushing. But the men never thought of self, or danger. That brave act will look well on their records. Then they began to bring out the men. One of the first was the one in whose hands was the powder when it flashed. He was laid down on top of the tower turret with a blanket under his head. I went to him. I could not recognize him. His hands were burned to the bone. The flesh was gone. With these hands raised above his chest and the tips of the fingers bent towards each other, he could hear him say, 'Oh, God, Oh God, Oh God.' He could not move his lips enough to utter other words. I bent closest to him. 'Dear fellow, God has heard your prayer.' He soon died.

SEVEN LOST THEIR LIVES IN LONDON DISASTER

Six Bodies Recovered—Miraculous Escape of Some of Them Who Were in Stores When Buildings Collapsed—Many Workers Voluteered Services

London, Ont., July 17.—After hours of suspense and sleeplessness, of unwearying toil and vigil, on the part of those engaged in removing wreckage, and to not a few hours of sorrow, the gloom into which London was plunged by yesterday's disaster was to some extent relieved today by the recovery of six bodies which had been recovered, and it is known that at least another is embedded in the ruins. The bodies recovered were those of: W. A. Hamilton, of Hamilton A. Long, Frank Smith, manager, Brewster Co., Joseph Long, of Hamilton & Long, Willie Tumbling, fourteen years of age, Oxford Street, Taunton Howitt, 505 Maitland Street.

Miraculous Escapes.

Some of the escapes would seem to have been almost miraculous. Mr. Peterson, of St. John, N.B., was with his wife and child shopping in Hamilton & Long's when the crash came. They at once sought refuge underneath the counter, and remained there for two hours before they were rescued. A two-year-old infant of a junk dealer named Pollock was taken out of the ruins in the cellar of one of the wrecked buildings. A peculiar feature of the rescue was the fact that the mother and baby were imprisoned in the same place, and that when a rope was lowered down and tied to the baby, the mother untied the rope. "The baby comes out only when I do," she declared. Later, however, Mrs. Pollock permitted the child to be taken up to safety. The infant smiled faintly when it reached the air above, and although it was covered with blood, did not appear to be seriously injured. Just after the little Pollock could not be taken out, the workers succeeded in getting out Ed. Peterson, a man of thirty-five years of age. Peterson was a farmer, and at the moment of the catastrophe was in the store of Hamilton, Long & Co. making purchases. In the fall of the ceiling he was pinned to the floor beneath a mass of wreckage, and though the rescuers could hear his calling, it was sometime before they were able to reach him or to cut him free. He was rescued by being carried out, he said: "I thank God, I'm all right." This escape was nothing short of a miracle.

Cranks Besiege Roosevelt.

The secret service guards intercepted her and placed her on board an outgoing train. They were unable to discover what she based her claim on. As she was leaving town an old man appeared at the village post office and announced in a loud tone: "I am the devil, and am going to see President Roosevelt." He has not yet been apprehended by the president's guards.

The Allegheny left this port this evening on her regular trip north.
