Life in Soviet Russia as Seen by an Englishman.

The London correspondent of "the Manchester Guardian," Mr. W. T. Goode, recently returned, sets forth the results of an extended trip of study in Soviet territory in a series of articles which have aroused great interest in England. He also tells, for the first time, the story in full of his arrest at Revel by the Estonian authorities and his detention on British warships for one month, acts which he describes as grossly outrageous.

At Revel, we are told, he was put under arrest by an Estonian officer and kept for thirty hours at the local jail, during which period he had neither food nor sleep. On his release, obtained through his energetic insistence and accompanied by the admission that his arrest had been undertaken on request by the British command, he was invited on board the British destroyer Venturous, whose commander offered to take him to Helsingfors. Instead, however, he was conducted to Bjorko—an act he characterizes as kidnapping—examined by the British officer in command, Admiral Cowan, and removed to the light cruiser Danae, on which he remained until his landing at Sheerness on September 29, after the lapse of more than three weeks. In closing the account of his adventure Mr. Goode remarks that "he has yet to receive any explanation of the gross outrage of his arrest and detention."

A Dangerous Trip.
The trip from Revel to the Soviet capital was one fraught with numberless dangers and difficulties. At last, however, the correspondent interview was ended my companion naively expressed his wonderment.

"The guidance of the interview was left to me, I began at once. I wanted to know how far the proposals which Mr. Bullitt took to the conference at Paris still held good. Lenin replied that they still held good, with modifications as the changing military situation might indicate. Later he added that in the agreement with Bullitt it had been stated that the changing military position might bring in alterations. Continuing, he said Bullitt was unable to understand the strength of British and American capitalism, but that if Bullitt were President of the United States peace would soon be made.

"Then I took up again the thread by asking what was the attitude of the Soviet Republic to the small nations who had split off the Russian Empire and had proclaimed their independence.

He replied that Finland's independence had been recognized in November, 1917; that he (Lenin) had personally handed to Svinhuvud, then head of the Finnish Republic, the paper on which this recognition was officially stated; that the Soviet Republic had announced some time previously that no soldiers of the Soviet Republic would cross the frontier with arms in their hands; that the Soviet Republic had decided to create a neutral strip or zone between its territory and Estonia, and would declare this publicly; that it was one of its principles to recognizing the independence of all small nations, and that finally it had just recognized the independence of the Bashkir Republic—and, he added, the Bashkirs are a weak and backward people.

Propaganda.
"For the third time I took up the questioning, asking what guarantees could be offered against official propaganda among the Western peoples if by any chance relations with the Soviet Republic were opened. His reply was that they had declared to Bullitt that they were ready to sign an agreement not to make official propaganda. As a Government they were ready to undertake that no official propaganda should take place; if private persons undertook propaganda they would do it as their own risk and be amenable to the laws of the country in which they acted."

BRYANT WASHBURN
"Something to Do"

He was the last word in uselessness. He never did anything for anybody in his life.

Then he got a sudden ambition to do "something for somebody."

Oh boy, oh boy! where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise—and Bryant Washburn doesn't miss it! "wise one." Don't miss it! Attraction in two parts entitled.

but one of them works regularly from lunch time to 3 or 4 o'clock a.m., and has never been known to go out to breathe fresh air; another takes only five hours' sleep; still another takes less.

"The commissaries or ministries are well housed, elaborately organized, and highly staffed. The number of people working directly in them, or in connection with them in the provinces, is immense.

Numbers of bourgeois and of former functionaries are employed, and at first one of the greatest dangers and difficulties was the amount of sabotage experienced. But this was dealt with ruthlessly, and sabotage was made one of the crimes answerable to the revolutionary tribunal—the extraordinary commission. The head and front of the whole organization is supplied by the Communists—who have a party of their own to which the leaders belong. Its discipline, self-imposed, is complete and unique, and is rigidly observed. When called upon for some duty, however distasteful, the professed Communist must obey without hesitation. At times even the leaders are ordered off into the country to some part where propaganda, explanation, or justification is needed—and they go.

"In cases where some lapse occurs—bribery or lawbreaking—of the offender be a non-Communist he is punished with prison, if a Communist he is shot as a traitor to his principle."

The climax of Mr. Goode's experiences at Moscow was his long-awaited interview with Lenin himself, secured with much difficulty, for the time of the Soviet chief is extremely valuable. On the morning of the appointment Mr. Goode drove up to the Kremlin and entered the building where Lenin lived. Here is the account of the interview:

"I hung my hat and coat in the ante-chamber, passed through a room in which clerks were at work, and entered the room in which the executive committee of the Council of People's Commissaries holds its meetings—in other words, the council chamber of the Cabinet of the Soviet Republic. I had kept my appointment strictly to time, and my companion passed on (rooms in Russia are always en suite) to let Lenin know that I had arrived. I then followed him into a room in which Lenin works and waited a minute for his coming. Here let me say that there is no magnificence about this suite of rooms. They are well and solidly furnished; the council chamber is admirably arranged for its purpose, but everything is simple, and there is an atmosphere of hard work about everything. Of the magnificent splendor I had heard so much there is not a trace.

Lenin.

"I had but the time to make these observations, mentally, when Lenin entered the room. He is a man of middle height, about fifty years old, active and well proportioned. His
