Our Local Industries. A SUGGESTION.

Dear Sir,—The campaign now being waged for the increased consumption of local products is worthy of the fullest public support. Its many advantages are at once apparent. Many of our people who might compelled to emigrate should be abled to produce in their own country goods that would otherwise be imported, thus conferring a double benefit on the community. Is it not plain that if we send $100 out of the country for goods that could be made here that we are rendering ourselves 200 worse off? The same self-evident calculation applies to a million dollars worth. Then why enrich foreign countries et a double cost to our own? A good deal of advertising has been given to this im-ortant subject and it cannot be too girongiy reiterated. Its promoters, however, seem to have missed a not important factor, perhaps the

Liquid Fuel

The great strike of the coal miners on less than the oft-repeated warnings of coming exhaustion of miners directs attention more and more to other sources of fuel supply. In this connection it is interesting to note that Mr R P Hearne, a British authority.

states: "Within ten years the power it will be broken not by political or economic methods, but by the arrival of a new fuel which will displace coal.

The age of liquid fuel has already commenced, and we are only at the beginning of immense technical, industrial and social developments." "The coal miner will disappear," he goes on, "the remaining coal measures will be carbonized in the earth, and the gases piped to the surface for conversion into gas for working engines that produce electricity. The residue of gases will be convered into motor fuel, heavy

For this reason too the rivalry and jealousy which exist in respect to the ownership of oil fields have taken on international importance. The search for new wells proceeds in practically every country of the world, and the discovery of fresh sources creates the Ships, locomotives, airplanes, motor cars and an increasing number of en-oil, and steam is fast becoming old-fashioned. It is thought that beneath most of the coal mines rich measures of oil exist, and that when the mines themselves become exhausted they will Flannel Facts.

Flannel is "all wool," but "flan-nelette" is all cotton! True, it has a soft raised surface or fleece, too, is very infiammable. A match held near it will turn it into a sheet of flame instantly. The only cure for that danger is to rinse any garment made of flan-nelette in warn water in which alum

-two ounces to a gallon-has been Flannelette is cheap, but it is not warming, because cotton cannot warm.

On the other hand, it is a rapid conductor of heat, and thus takes away the naturally produced warmth from the body, and dissipates it. But flan-nelette is more hygienic. All-wool flannel is warming and stimulating.

This is due to the edge on it which some people find irritating. But it is a great stimulant to blood circulation.

Wool has no affinity for, and will not "take," damp. It is a slow conductor, and a big generator, of heat; does not rub the body, and protects it from outside variations of tem-

Pure wool must shrink, and "unshrinkable" woolens can only be made such by robbing the wool of much of its goodness. Linen is the most durable textile, and although it is easily cleaned, and is a non-harbourer of dirt and germs, it is too cold and too rapid a conductor of heat to wear next the body. Silk has some of the qualities of wool, and is of health values because it resists the peculiar effect on many people of electrical changes in the
