Fairbanks in "The Three Musketeers" Coming.

"Doug" Has Achieved the Ambition of a Lifetime in the Character of D'Artagnan.

Predictions are being made that the screening of Alexander Dumas immortal story, "The Three Musketeers," by Douglas Fairbanks will stand forth in motion picture history as an epochal event and that it will popularize for all time the costume photoplay.

"A popular picture nowadays," said the star, "must be logical; it must have comedy and pathos, but above all it must be human. Any story that is human will succeed regardless of whether the players wear wigs and short pants or are garbed in pyjamas. Drama was the same in the Seventeenth Century as it is today. This may be the gasoline age of civilization, but it hasn't altered human emotions appreciably. People still laugh and cry and give vent to anger. And they are still inordinately curious. In fact, we progress because we are curious. People of today wonder if in the olden days kings and queens and dukes and lords were swayed by the same passions and emotions that now rule humanity. To satisfy in a measure this curiosity we have made a celluloid reproduction of "The Three Musketeers," and we have crammed into it everything that is dramatic, instructive, human, amusing and entertaining. We have tried to twang every emotion in the human system, just as D'Artagnan did in his memoirs, and as Dumas did in his great novel."

The best talent procurable has been called upon to help transcribe this great story to the aluminum sheet. Edward Knoblock, one of the greatest of contemporary playwrights, is responsible for adaptation, research and costumes, while to Fred Niblo goes the honor of directing the piece. Niblo, a born adventurer, has won distinction as a master in guiding the destinies of this type of play; he is said to have no peer. Arthur Edson, rated as a genuine lens artist, is credited with the photography and is said to have achieved some effects which hitherto have been considered impossible.

Arrangements have been made for the showing of this feature at the Majestic Theatre, where it will be the main attraction for 8 days.
