He had never seen the memorandum by Michael Connolly which this agreement was to supersede, but had no doubt latt it was the agreement already put in evidence. Although he did not know to whom this $25,000 was to be paid, he assented to giving it, because he knew very well it would be given anyhow. St. CATHARINES, April 20, 1881.

My Dear Mike.—I am in receipt of your letter of the 22nd inst., also the newspers. The Telegraph has decidedly the beat of the argument. The Chronicle article was inspired, no doubt, but by I drove Mr. Page to Port Dalhousie, and we fully discussed the graving dock question. In the course of our conversation he said: "Did you see a short article in the Mail about Perley being in Quebec, and stating that the dock and the harbor works, so far as the engineering was concerned, was all right, and that the contractors were responsible?" I said that I had not seen the article, nor had I, that I had not seen the article, not as I had not received the paper. I said: "Mr. Page, your name has been frequently mentioned as the proper person to inspect that work. If you are asked to do so as a special favor to myself will you kindly do so?" He said, "I will." Now, if you the parties that are working up the a special ravor to mysel will would kindly do so?" He said, "I will." Now, if you get the parties that are working up the business to have Mr. Page called on to report on the plans and work it will be greatly to our interest. The Dominion Board of Arbitrators are now here. I had them all at my house last night. One of them is Simard, of Montreal, a first cousin of Langevin's. He said that whenever I wanted anything done with Langevin to let him know. This is not a bad card. Write soon. Yours truly, P. Larkin. Anent the Street Railway Scandal.

TORONTO, Aug. 3.—The street railway scandal is again the one topic of conversation, owing to the remarkable letter recently published by E. A. Macdonald announcing he had received the sum of $4,500 from Noel Marshall as an inducement to stop the suit he had commenced. Mr. Marshall says he gave the money personally, and his only conmetion with the street car tenders is that he is manager of the business of which nection with the street car tenders is that he is manager of the business of which McKenzie, one of the Kiely-Everett syndicate, is proprietor, but it is not so clear why he should have consented to pay such a sum to Macdonald simply to have proceedings stopped unless there was something behind.

The most remarkable development of all is the sworn statement that E. A. Macdonald then endeavored to blackmail the syndicate or its representatives out of $15,000 more on threat of publishing a point from a photograph of check of $4,500 first given him as hush money.

Coleman and Marshall gave the whole thing away last night, and admitted payment of the hush-money rather than let Macdonald make capital by publishing the first check as he proposed. The meeting

Mr. Truax asked the Minister of Customs if Mr. McNamara, sub-collector of customs at Walkerton, resigned his position prior to or during the election in February and March last, and if so when he was reappointed. He also made the further inquiry whether it was the intention of the Government to keep in office public officials who take an active part in the elections, and invited an answer on the point of whether they considered it improper for officials who are paid out of the revenues of the people to so conduct themselves.

Mr. Bowell replied that a seizure of iron bridge plates had been made. The department, he said, never gave up the names of informers. The informer in this case received no portion of the proceeds for the simple reason that nothing was collected further than the duty, which was considered sufficient after the investigation into the circumstances had been made.

MINISTERS ON THE INTERCOLONIAL.

Mr. Barron had this interesting question on the paper: "Is it the regulation that ministers of the gospel and clergymen travel upon the Intercolonial and Government railways at a reduced rate? If so, what is the reduction? Is the reduction confined to the Province of Quebec or is it available to all such persons residing elsewhere than in the Province of Quebec? What official has authority to grant a certificate for reduced rates to clergymen if such are granted? Is Mr. Stocking the agent of the Intercolonial at the city office in Quebec? If so, is the Government aware that he has declared that the privilege of reduced rates is confined to the clergy of Quebec?

Mr. Bowell replied that tickets were issued at roduced rates to ministers of the gospel and clergymen at half the regular first-class fare. The reduction was not confined to Quebec but was available to all clergymen who had their certificates. Mr. Stocking was not the agent of the Intercolonial Railway at Quebec, and the Government was not responsible for anything that gentleman might say.

Sir John Thompson, asking that the debate be adjourned on account of the thinness of the House, explained the position the Government proposed taking with regard to it. He said that whatever the merits of the conflict in which these men took part might be in the public mind, it affected only two Provinces of the federation, and it was not, therefore, in his opinion appropriate for this Parilament, representative as it is not of this two only, but of Provinces not interested in those events, to confer distinction upon the participants in it, honorable though their memory might be. With regard to all such conflicts taking place before Confederation, much as their heroism might be admired, he believed it would be best to let them be forgotten, or at least not have this federated Parliament revive them. The Government proposed in connection with this question, he said, that the House be asked to let history do justice to the memories of these men who in two Provinces did so question, he said, that the House be asked to let history do justice to the memories of those men who in two Provinces did so much to preserve the liberty of our institutions. However, as there were members of the House who wished to speak on the subject and who were not present because they had not expected the order would be reached so early in the evening, he would move the adjournment of the debate.
