

TRAITORS TO CIVILIZATION ASSISTING WARLIKE SAVAGES

While Renegades Instruct Them in the Arts of Modern Warfare
—An Austrian Fights for the Mad Mullah—Strange
Story of Osman Digna.

In nearly every war made upon savages today by civilized powers the savages are assisted by white men who have become traitors to civilization. Such renegades are scattered in all the remote corners of the earth, and the stress of battle always brings them to the forefront.

The British troops campaigning in Somaliland are learning to their cost that the Mad Mullah is assisted by a white man thoroughly familiar with the art of modern warfare. His name is Karl Jager. He was an officer in the Austrian army until a year or two ago.

An English officer—Captain Thorpe, of the York and Lancaster Light Infantry—who knew him in Budapest, speaks of Jager as an exceptionally brilliant soldier, with a natural gift for tactics and for commanding men. He is a native of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English. He was a member of the Austro-Hungarian army, and was a member of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English.

He disappeared from Budapest shortly before the outbreak in Somaliland, and his whereabouts were not known until he was sighted in the desert, acting as a lieutenant in the Mad Mullah's army. Native spies reported that he had adopted the Mohammedan religion in Cairo and was taken to the Mad Mullah's camp through Italian Somaliland, where some Arab pilgrims whom he met in Cairo on his return from Mecca. It is asserted that he had much to do with stirring up the recent war and persuading the Mad Mullah to defy the British.

Curiously enough, his old acquaintance, Capt. Thorpe, has been "seconded" from his regiment and attached to the Somaliland field force as a special service officer. Thus they may meet face to face in battle. In that case one of the other is likely to "go under" for Capt. Thorpe, in command of the British troops in the desert, who has vowed to risk the uttermost peril to slay this traitor to civilization, who is held responsible for the terrible cutting-up of Col. Swaine's expedition some months ago.

In Lord Lansdowne, the British foreign minister, confidently asked the Austrian Government whether it was true that Jager had joined the Mullah. The Austrian Government replied that there was reason to believe he had, and added a day that if he was caught he would be shown no mercy. That was rather superfluous, the British minister might have said to allow him much time to say his prayers.

Jager appears to be gifted with the qualities that impress the savage mind. He is a brilliant planner, a strategist, and a brave. He is the bravest of the brave in the desert. Over and over again he has been seen in the forefront of the Mullah's forces, and many times his weight in lead has been felt at him, but he seems to bear a charmed life.

He is exceedingly valuable to the Mullah because, knowing the tactics of rifle and Maxim fire, he prevents the Somali from making any mistake in the use of his arms. He is a native of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English. He was a member of the Austro-Hungarian army, and was a member of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English.

It is said that he was in the employment of the Government of Egypt in his youth, and that he was a member of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English. He was a member of the Austro-Hungarian army, and was a member of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English.

It is said that he was in the employment of the Government of Egypt in his youth, and that he was a member of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English. He was a member of the Austro-Hungarian army, and was a member of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English.

It is said that he was in the employment of the Government of Egypt in his youth, and that he was a member of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English. He was a member of the Austro-Hungarian army, and was a member of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English.

It is said that he was in the employment of the Government of Egypt in his youth, and that he was a member of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English. He was a member of the Austro-Hungarian army, and was a member of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English.

It is said that he was in the employment of the Government of Egypt in his youth, and that he was a member of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English. He was a member of the Austro-Hungarian army, and was a member of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English.

It is said that he was in the employment of the Government of Egypt in his youth, and that he was a member of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English. He was a member of the Austro-Hungarian army, and was a member of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English.

It is said that he was in the employment of the Government of Egypt in his youth, and that he was a member of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English. He was a member of the Austro-Hungarian army, and was a member of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English.

It is said that he was in the employment of the Government of Egypt in his youth, and that he was a member of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English. He was a member of the Austro-Hungarian army, and was a member of the Danube valley, and speaks fluently in German, Hungarian, and English.

THE SYSTEM OF OPERATING A GREAT MAIL-ORDER STORE

How the Correspondence Is Handled—Houses With Employees
Enough to Fill a Large Village—Examples of Amusing Letters Received.

"You can't buy anything here," said the man who stopped me at the big front door, "and you can't order anything if you come from the city."

"I don't want to buy anything," said I, "and I come from a city—far away. I've come to see how you do it."

We stood in the corridor of a great building with twenty-five acres of floor room and two millions of dollars in stock, ranging from the most common of commodities to the most refined of luxuries. On one side was a spacious office, iron grated like a bank; on the other a check room and a telephone exchange as big as a central station. It was the ground floor of a mail-order store.

A store like this seems to the innkeeper a curiosity, a problem, a community. The company sends out a catalogue; it is filled with commodities numbered and priced and pictured. You would think that people who want to buy would write, and the company would send them the goods. But it is not so simple.

The letter reaches the mail-order store among the other two or three thousand that come every day, and from the basement it speeds upward on a pneumatic tube to the correspondence department, which covers space as large as a baseball field. There a girl—perhaps a pretty girl with a white collar and a white apron—looks at the letter, takes out your money or express order, writes a quick note, and puts it on an order entry, a quick-grinding boy who is chewing gum but is quick on his feet. Back it goes to the shipping department, where the goods are packed and the bill is made out. Then it goes to the warehouse, where the goods are stored, and finally to the customer's door.

But let us suppose you do not like your harmonica when it comes, and you write to the company to return it. The letter reaches the correspondence department, where a girl looks at it, and writes a note to the warehouse, where a boy takes it out of the stock, and sends it back to the customer. The company's expense; they will not even be paid for the return of the goods. But the company's expense; they will not even be paid for the return of the goods.

The employees are often numerous enough to make a New England village and are of all kinds, from the spry and energetic girl to the elderly woman who travels first-class and who picks up a few dollars a week. In one of these stores is a mail-order store for the sale of goods in the United States and can tell you its State, county, and location in an instant. A woman who works in the correspondence department of the public, and holds it open upon his willing knee, he realizes nothing of the problems it involves. He is a man who is paid to be a man, and he is a man who is paid to be a man.

"Dear Sirs," wrote one man who had received an advertisement with a halfpenny picture of a man in a top hat. "I am glad you thought to send me your photograph. I enclose a picture of my own, and I hope you will like it. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

THE SYSTEM OF OPERATING A GREAT MAIL-ORDER STORE

How the Correspondence Is Handled—Houses With Employees
Enough to Fill a Large Village—Examples of
Amusing Letters Received.

"You can't buy anything here," said the man who stopped me at the big front door, "and you can't order anything if you come from the city."

"I don't want to buy anything," said I, "and I come from a city—far away. I've come to see how you do it."

We stood in the corridor of a great building with twenty-five acres of floor room and two millions of dollars in stock, ranging from the most common of commodities to the most refined of luxuries. On one side was a spacious office, iron grated like a bank; on the other a check room and a telephone exchange as big as a central station. It was the ground floor of a mail-order store.

A store like this seems to the innkeeper a curiosity, a problem, a community. The company sends out a catalogue; it is filled with commodities numbered and priced and pictured. You would think that people who want to buy would write, and the company would send them the goods. But it is not so simple.

The letter reaches the mail-order store among the other two or three thousand that come every day, and from the basement it speeds upward on a pneumatic tube to the correspondence department, which covers space as large as a baseball field. There a girl—perhaps a pretty girl with a white collar and a white apron—looks at the letter, takes out your money or express order, writes a quick note, and puts it on an order entry, a quick-grinding boy who is chewing gum but is quick on his feet. Back it goes to the shipping department, where the goods are packed and the bill is made out. Then it goes to the warehouse, where the goods are stored, and finally to the customer's door.

But let us suppose you do not like your harmonica when it comes, and you write to the company to return it. The letter reaches the correspondence department, where a girl looks at it, and writes a note to the warehouse, where a boy takes it out of the stock, and sends it back to the customer. The company's expense; they will not even be paid for the return of the goods. But the company's expense; they will not even be paid for the return of the goods.

The employees are often numerous enough to make a New England village and are of all kinds, from the spry and energetic girl to the elderly woman who travels first-class and who picks up a few dollars a week. In one of these stores is a mail-order store for the sale of goods in the United States and can tell you its State, county, and location in an instant. A woman who works in the correspondence department of the public, and holds it open upon his willing knee, he realizes nothing of the problems it involves. He is a man who is paid to be a man, and he is a man who is paid to be a man.

"Dear Sirs," wrote one man who had received an advertisement with a halfpenny picture of a man in a top hat. "I am glad you thought to send me your photograph. I enclose a picture of my own, and I hope you will like it. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

THE SYSTEM OF OPERATING A GREAT MAIL-ORDER STORE

How the Correspondence Is Handled—Houses With Employees
Enough to Fill a Large Village—Examples of
Amusing Letters Received.

"You can't buy anything here," said the man who stopped me at the big front door, "and you can't order anything if you come from the city."

"I don't want to buy anything," said I, "and I come from a city—far away. I've come to see how you do it."

We stood in the corridor of a great building with twenty-five acres of floor room and two millions of dollars in stock, ranging from the most common of commodities to the most refined of luxuries. On one side was a spacious office, iron grated like a bank; on the other a check room and a telephone exchange as big as a central station. It was the ground floor of a mail-order store.

A store like this seems to the innkeeper a curiosity, a problem, a community. The company sends out a catalogue; it is filled with commodities numbered and priced and pictured. You would think that people who want to buy would write, and the company would send them the goods. But it is not so simple.

The letter reaches the mail-order store among the other two or three thousand that come every day, and from the basement it speeds upward on a pneumatic tube to the correspondence department, which covers space as large as a baseball field. There a girl—perhaps a pretty girl with a white collar and a white apron—looks at the letter, takes out your money or express order, writes a quick note, and puts it on an order entry, a quick-grinding boy who is chewing gum but is quick on his feet. Back it goes to the shipping department, where the goods are packed and the bill is made out. Then it goes to the warehouse, where the goods are stored, and finally to the customer's door.

But let us suppose you do not like your harmonica when it comes, and you write to the company to return it. The letter reaches the correspondence department, where a girl looks at it, and writes a note to the warehouse, where a boy takes it out of the stock, and sends it back to the customer. The company's expense; they will not even be paid for the return of the goods. But the company's expense; they will not even be paid for the return of the goods.

The employees are often numerous enough to make a New England village and are of all kinds, from the spry and energetic girl to the elderly woman who travels first-class and who picks up a few dollars a week. In one of these stores is a mail-order store for the sale of goods in the United States and can tell you its State, county, and location in an instant. A woman who works in the correspondence department of the public, and holds it open upon his willing knee, he realizes nothing of the problems it involves. He is a man who is paid to be a man, and he is a man who is paid to be a man.

"Dear Sirs," wrote one man who had received an advertisement with a halfpenny picture of a man in a top hat. "I am glad you thought to send me your photograph. I enclose a picture of my own, and I hope you will like it. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

THE SYSTEM OF OPERATING A GREAT MAIL-ORDER STORE

How the Correspondence Is Handled—Houses With Employees
Enough to Fill a Large Village—Examples of
Amusing Letters Received.

"You can't buy anything here," said the man who stopped me at the big front door, "and you can't order anything if you come from the city."

"I don't want to buy anything," said I, "and I come from a city—far away. I've come to see how you do it."

We stood in the corridor of a great building with twenty-five acres of floor room and two millions of dollars in stock, ranging from the most common of commodities to the most refined of luxuries. On one side was a spacious office, iron grated like a bank; on the other a check room and a telephone exchange as big as a central station. It was the ground floor of a mail-order store.

A store like this seems to the innkeeper a curiosity, a problem, a community. The company sends out a catalogue; it is filled with commodities numbered and priced and pictured. You would think that people who want to buy would write, and the company would send them the goods. But it is not so simple.

The letter reaches the mail-order store among the other two or three thousand that come every day, and from the basement it speeds upward on a pneumatic tube to the correspondence department, which covers space as large as a baseball field. There a girl—perhaps a pretty girl with a white collar and a white apron—looks at the letter, takes out your money or express order, writes a quick note, and puts it on an order entry, a quick-grinding boy who is chewing gum but is quick on his feet. Back it goes to the shipping department, where the goods are packed and the bill is made out. Then it goes to the warehouse, where the goods are stored, and finally to the customer's door.

But let us suppose you do not like your harmonica when it comes, and you write to the company to return it. The letter reaches the correspondence department, where a girl looks at it, and writes a note to the warehouse, where a boy takes it out of the stock, and sends it back to the customer. The company's expense; they will not even be paid for the return of the goods. But the company's expense; they will not even be paid for the return of the goods.

The employees are often numerous enough to make a New England village and are of all kinds, from the spry and energetic girl to the elderly woman who travels first-class and who picks up a few dollars a week. In one of these stores is a mail-order store for the sale of goods in the United States and can tell you its State, county, and location in an instant. A woman who works in the correspondence department of the public, and holds it open upon his willing knee, he realizes nothing of the problems it involves. He is a man who is paid to be a man, and he is a man who is paid to be a man.

"Dear Sirs," wrote one man who had received an advertisement with a halfpenny picture of a man in a top hat. "I am glad you thought to send me your photograph. I enclose a picture of my own, and I hope you will like it. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

THE SYSTEM OF OPERATING A GREAT MAIL-ORDER STORE

How the Correspondence Is Handled—Houses With Employees
Enough to Fill a Large Village—Examples of
Amusing Letters Received.

"You can't buy anything here," said the man who stopped me at the big front door, "and you can't order anything if you come from the city."

"I don't want to buy anything," said I, "and I come from a city—far away. I've come to see how you do it."

We stood in the corridor of a great building with twenty-five acres of floor room and two millions of dollars in stock, ranging from the most common of commodities to the most refined of luxuries. On one side was a spacious office, iron grated like a bank; on the other a check room and a telephone exchange as big as a central station. It was the ground floor of a mail-order store.

A store like this seems to the innkeeper a curiosity, a problem, a community. The company sends out a catalogue; it is filled with commodities numbered and priced and pictured. You would think that people who want to buy would write, and the company would send them the goods. But it is not so simple.

The letter reaches the mail-order store among the other two or three thousand that come every day, and from the basement it speeds upward on a pneumatic tube to the correspondence department, which covers space as large as a baseball field. There a girl—perhaps a pretty girl with a white collar and a white apron—looks at the letter, takes out your money or express order, writes a quick note, and puts it on an order entry, a quick-grinding boy who is chewing gum but is quick on his feet. Back it goes to the shipping department, where the goods are packed and the bill is made out. Then it goes to the warehouse, where the goods are stored, and finally to the customer's door.

But let us suppose you do not like your harmonica when it comes, and you write to the company to return it. The letter reaches the correspondence department, where a girl looks at it, and writes a note to the warehouse, where a boy takes it out of the stock, and sends it back to the customer. The company's expense; they will not even be paid for the return of the goods. But the company's expense; they will not even be paid for the return of the goods.

The employees are often numerous enough to make a New England village and are of all kinds, from the spry and energetic girl to the elderly woman who travels first-class and who picks up a few dollars a week. In one of these stores is a mail-order store for the sale of goods in the United States and can tell you its State, county, and location in an instant. A woman who works in the correspondence department of the public, and holds it open upon his willing knee, he realizes nothing of the problems it involves. He is a man who is paid to be a man, and he is a man who is paid to be a man.

"Dear Sirs," wrote one man who had received an advertisement with a halfpenny picture of a man in a top hat. "I am glad you thought to send me your photograph. I enclose a picture of my own, and I hope you will like it. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

"I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man. I am a man who is paid to be a man, and I am a man who is paid to be a man."

There is nothing like Sunlight Soap for Household Utensils.

When you have to use hard water it is not an easy matter to wash household utensils. To do good washing you should have good soap and soft water (rain water). If you use hard water you must have good soap, and the best soap you can get is Sunlight Soap because it softens the hard water and makes a copious creamy lather. Use Sunlight Soap for all household purposes and the results will surprise you.

SUNLIGHT SOAP

ASK FOR THE OCTAGON BAR.

Sunlight Soap washes the clothes white without injuring the hands.

LEVER BROTHERS LIMITED, TORONTO.

To get that appetizing, brown appearance and outside crispiness on roasts of lamb, beef, etc.—to keep their goodness in them they must be basted. In the old style stove this necessitated reaching into the hot oven and moving the hot, heavy pan and holding it in the front of the oven while it was basted. A tedious performance with unsatisfactory results. The draw-out oven rack of the makes basting a simple and successful operation. Draw the handle in front of the oven forward and the rack brings the pan and its contents out of the oven where it may be thoroughly basted with the greatest ease. The Imperial Oxford Range lessens the labor of cooking and insures the most successful results.

Imperial Oxford Range

Call at one of our agencies or write for the Imperial Oxford leaflet.

The Gurney Foundry Co. Limited

Toronto

Montreal, Winnipeg and Vancouver

FOR SALE BY THE GURNEY OXFORD STOVE STORE

F. G. Brenton, Manager, 233 Richmond Street, London.

Whales Dive Deep.

Both whalers and naturalists have usually held that when whales "sound" they descend to great depths. One writer on the subject estimates that the members of the group dive fully a thousand yards. In a memoir published in Belgium Dr. Racovitz challenges this belief, and states that, in his opinion, 100 yards is the normal depth to which any whale can dive, and that many species cannot reach anything like that limit. Says the writer:

Why should whales want to go to such depths? All whales sound for the purpose of obtaining food, and in the profound darkness of deep waters, how could they get? These species which feed on animals might, perhaps, obtain what they want. But how about the species which feed on fishes and cuttlefish? At a depth of a thousand yards they certainly could not use their eyes to detect nonluminescent prey, and we have no evidence whatever they feed on self-luminous deep-sea fish and cuttlefish. If, indeed, there be any of the latter, on the contrary, the available evidence indicates that they feed on ordinary live-in-much-shallower-zones, but this is not all. It is known that the pressure of a pressure of more than three atmospheres prove fatal to human life; and, although we may believe that whales can resist such pressure, or nine atmospheres, which would occur at about 900 yards' depth, it is conceivable that they could resist the effect of ten times the latter pressure, or ninety atmos