

LADS HURT AT PERRIN'S ARE SLOWLY RECOVERING

Mr. Patrick Highland Is Not So Well Today—Is Some-what Weaker.

There is some improvement noted in the condition of Sam Govier and John R. Walspring, the two young lads injured in the accident at Perrin's on Thursday. Both showed signs of returning consciousness today, and there is an improvement noted in other ways. Their condition is much more satisfactory than for some days. While they are still in a critical condition hopes are being entertained that they will recover.

AN ELOQUENT APPEAL FOR CHRISTIAN UNITY

Archdeacon Madden, of Liverpool in St. Paul's Cathedral.

Sunday morning in St. Paul's Cathedral, Archdeacon T. Madden, of Liverpool, England, delivered an eloquent appeal for Christian unity. The text of his sermon was the third verse of the fourth chapter of Ephesians, "Endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace." "Christian unity," declared the archdeacon, "is probably the most popular religious topic in England today." The English movement for the reunion of the divided sects of Christianity may be said to have had its beginning in the meeting of the Pan-Anglican Congress in London, at the Lambeth Conference, which followed, Dean Robinson, of Westminster, spoke in favor of the movement, and further developments took place. Since then all over the world, men and non-conformists have met together to discuss the points on which they agree or disagree, and negotiations have also been made with the Lutheran church in Germany and the Presbyterian movement in Australia. But unity is not to be arrived at today or tomorrow. Three things are first required, namely, patience (for the intolerance and errors of the past), and patience and prayer. God in his own time will bring about the consummation of unity in the churches, and in the hearts and lives of men.

The Evangelical Alliance aims at the alliance of Christian peoples, the federation of Christian churches, and ultimately their reunion into one great Catholic church.

The alliance is also one of Christian faith and evangelical truth. "The deity of Christ is today being attacked by the followers of the new theology and other bizarre beliefs," said Archdeacon Madden. "If we eliminate the Godhead in Christ, we have a body without a soul, Christ was very God and very man, and we believe in the atonement which he made for our sins. We stand for one common belief, one orthodox faith."

Referring to social conditions, the archdeacon declared that "Change of heart and change of life are the bed-rock of all social improvement. Mere philanthropy only touches the body. For permanent change and real good we must reach the soul first."

"Christendom has long been divided because men will remember Cromwell and the death of Charles I, the martyrdom of Lady Jane Grey, the persecutions of John Bunyan. But the controversies of the past are dead, and soon a united church shall go forward to conquer and redeem in the name and unity of Christ."

HAD A CLOSE CALL

Train on Which Minister of Justice Was Riding Narrowly Escapes Wreck.

Ottawa, Oct. 10.—The crew of a freight train leaving a broken rail prevented a serious accident at Montreal-Ottawa G. T. R. train, due here at 11:10 on Saturday night. The break occurred at a point about three miles east of Carleton Place.

It was located by the crew of a freight train from Ottawa, who reported at the next station. The passenger train, which leaves Montreal at 8 o'clock, was quickly flagged and managed to crawl over the break, arriving in the capital half an hour late.

On the train were Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, minister of justice, and party returning from The Hague conference. The minister made an examination of the broken rail, which was over a foot in length, and also inquired from the conductor concerning the cause of the break.

"BURY ME IN OCEAN," SAID GIRL

New Orleans, Oct. 8.—Miss Marjorie Miller, 18 years old, daughter of Dean Walter Miller of Tulane University, was buried in the Gulf of Mexico by her own fixed choice. She was drowned several weeks ago while bathing near Tallulah Falls, Ga., where she was spending the summer. Her body was held until her father's return from Europe.

Miss Miller loved the water from childhood. She made repeated requests that her parents give her body to the ocean.

MISERY FROM A DISORDERED STOMACH INDIGESTION OR GAS SIMPLY VANISHES

Your Out-of-Order Stomach Feels Fine Five Minutes After Taking a Little Diapiesin.

Take your sour, out-of-order stomach—or maybe you call it indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis or Catarrh of Stomach; it doesn't matter—take your stomach trouble right with you to your Pharmacist and ask him to open a 10-cent case of Pape's Diapiesin and let you eat one 25-grain Tri-angle and see if within five minutes there is left any trace of your former misery.

The correct name for your trouble is Food Fermentation—food souring. The Digestive organs become weak; there is lack of gastric juice; your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating.

PRISONER CLAIMS HE WROTE HYMN

Just For Today" May Be Composition of Man Now in the Kingston Penitentiary.

HAS SUBMITTED PROOF

Former Evangelist Is Serving Seven Years For Obtaining Money Under False Pretences at Hamilton.

Toronto, Oct. 10.—To appear for many years in Anglican hymn books, including Hymns, Ancient and Modern, and the new Canadian Hymn Book, with the word "anonymous" beneath it because the authorship was unknown, to become endeared to the hearts of scores of thousands who thought the name of the man or woman who wrote it would never be known and to prove so popular that several composers have set it to music as a sacred song, only to have its real authorship disclosed through a letter from a convict in Kingston Penitentiary, may develop to be the fate of the beautiful hymn, "Just for Today."

The Archbishop of Ottawa received a letter a few days ago which was of such a character and made such claims that the matter will be investigated by the committee which compiled the new Anglican hymn book.

Looking into the Claims. The archbishop, who was a member of that committee, forwarded the letter to J. Edmund Jones, of Toronto, who is taking steps to look into the claims. The man who seeks to step into the breach heretofore bridged by the word "anonymous" is William Huckle, formerly of London, England, later of Hamilton, Ontario, and now in the penitentiary at Kingston.

Huckle urges as his reason for writing that if the composition is worthy of a place in the sacred book, the authorship should be acknowledged when that authorship is or can be known. But the convict does not end with a mere claim to the fathering of the stanzas, for he knew that scant attention would be paid to unsubstantiated claims. He has supplied dates on which editions of the hymn were printed, the cities they were printed in and discloses the name of one who is said to possess copies of the original.

The Hymn. "Be not therefore anxious for the morrow"—St. Matt., vi, 34. Lord, for tomorrow and its needs I do not pray; Keep me, my God, from stain of sin, Just for today.

Let me both diligently work And duly pray; Let me be kind in word and deed, Just for today.

Let me be slow to do my will, Prompt to obey; Help me to sacrifice myself, Just for today.

Let me no wrong or idle word Unthinkingly say; Set Thou a seal upon my lips, Just for today.

Let me in season, Lord, be grave, In season gay; Let me be faithful to Thy grace, Just for today.

Lord, for tomorrow and its needs, I do not pray; But keep me, guide me, love me, Lord, Just for today. Amen.

—Anon., 1880.

Huckle's Letter. In his letter to the bishop, Huckle says in part:

"The warden having given me permission to write to you regarding the authorship of hymn number 676 in the Book of Common Prayer, I beg to lay the following facts before you, feeling assured they will receive the consideration due them at your hands."

"In July, 1878, I was addressing an open-air meeting in Hyde Park, England, my subject being 'Infidelity versus Christianity.' During my remarks I referred to the love of God as exemplified in the provision He had made for man's sustenance. An infidel in the audience interrupted me, asking why we prayed to God for daily bread, why not ask for a year's supply? In reply I told a story of a little girl, who upon being asked the same question replied, 'Because we do not want stale bread, we want fresh bread each day.' I then led on, home and thinking about the incident, I composed a leaflet entitled 'Just for Today,' which I recited the following Sunday at an open-air meeting in Hyde Park. A gentleman, named Counsel, an Australian, who was present, asked me after the meeting if I would have the verses printed, offering to have 20,000 printed if I would agree for him to do so. A printer named Frederick Crawley printed them, and my name was attached. Another 20,000 were printed in 1885, 10,000 in 1887, and 10,000 in 1895, all printed in Toronto. Each time my name was attached."

"It has also been published in several religious papers. I understand the hymn 676 in 'The Book of Common Prayer' is my leaflet, 'Just for Today.' The last two verses have been altered. In the original they were rendered as follows:

"Cleanse and receive my parting soul, Be Thou my stay;

—Be Thou my stay;

SEND LIVERIES ABROAD

What Becomes of the Gorgeous Raiment of London's Lord Mayors.

London, Oct. 10.—The fall of the leaf warns lord mayors and sheriffs of London that their brief period of glory is nearly over and that a new set of civic dignitaries will soon take their places. But what about the gorgeous liveries of the servants of the functionaries, compelled to retire into the semi-obscurity of private life?

Bowdlerized versions of them do duty on the stage sometimes, but it is usually found more profitable to be servants, whose perquisites the liveries become, to send them abroad. An ex-sheff is said to have recognized one of his old liveries behind him in a New York mansion. Many go to Africa and end their existence lending lustre to the courts of savage kings.

People generally believe that the civic liveries are of a traditional cut and color and that they are as unchangeable as Gog and Magog and turtle soup, but this is not the professional view. The general style of the coat and breeches may be Queen Anne, the high cocked hat may be Regency,

"So for tomorrow and its needs I do not pray; But keep me, guide me, hold me, Lord Just for today."

"My wife has copies of the original, also of others which I have composed—which you may obtain from her, her address being 1200 Goodman street north, Rochester, U. S. A."

A Seven-Year Sentence. The sentence William Huckle is serving is one of seven years, more than two of which he has already put in. He was arrested and tried at Hamilton under the charge of obtaining money under false pretences. With him there was a man named Tierney convicted of the same offence. Tierney got a lighter sentence. Huckle had been proved to be posing as a private detective, in which guise he had threatened to disclose information he possessed if the parties involved did not hand over various sums of money to induce him to maintain silence. The sums were usually of generous proportions. At the time he was tried to appear to be about 40 or 50 years of age, according to people who were present. The case created a great deal of interest in Hamilton.

CONAN DOYLE QUITS WRITING OF PLAYS

Decides That Author Producer Job Is Too Much.

London, Oct. 8.—Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has decided to give up playwrighting. "I have no intention of ever again writing for the stage," said Sir Arthur, as he was leaving for his country place. "Don't think I am leaving the theatre because it does not interest me. It interests me much. It is so absorbing that it draws me mind away from the deeper things of life and makes me a specialist in reading or literary work. For those who can treat the deep matters of life dramatically it is different, but I recognize my own limitations in that respect, and so I made an absolute vow that I will not again write for the stage."

"I still have a few plays in the wings, but I wrote some time ago. If it is ever produced it will have to be at my own expense. The cost of production would prevent it ever being accepted by any manager, and I'm afraid it would frighten the most experienced of stage carpenters. I called it 'The Lift.' The scene lies at the top of Eiffel Tower. All the characters must ascend and descend in a regular working lift. Entrances are perpendicular instead of horizontal. The piece ends with a startling sensation, a terrible catastrophe."

"Lately I have been very busy with stage work," continued Sir Arthur. "You see, I have produced three plays in a little more than a year. That means going to the theatre pretty close attention. All three I produced entirely myself, and at my own expense, simply because I could not find a manager who would accept them or undertake the cost of producing them on his own account."

"King Edward's death eventually knocked the life out of my play, 'The House of Temperley.' That meant going to the theatre pretty close attention. All three I produced entirely myself, and at my own expense, simply because I could not find a manager who would accept them or undertake the cost of producing them on his own account."
