

by many an entomologist, I would recommend horticulturists not to crush them out of existence when they fall in with them, but to pack them off uninjured to some entomologist of their acquaintance. By so doing they will, possibly, both save their trees and advance the cause of science.

ble our

in their
considerata