CONCRETE SUITABLE FOR PRACTICAL USES, REPORT OF EXPERTS

S. P. S. Professor Likely To Say Pavements Good.

The report of the experts at the School of Practical Science, Toronto, on the construction of the foundation of the chmond street pavement will be in ondon next week, it is expected. The other day, Professor Marshall, a nember of the staff, came to London, and made a report on the work. He ested the foundation, and informed the ommittee that it was not necessary to reak up the pavement to send samples a Toronto.

His opinion was to the effect that alle technically the work was not the for all practical purposes it ign-class concrete, equal to any. The gist of the whole thing is summer in this manner—to increase the efficiency of the contract of th evening's sermon on "Spiritualism, the day's discourse New Spookology," and also the replies Research School-the imposing title and signature almost took my breath away after perusing her mental effort.

I am pleased to notice some of our ministers taking such a strong stand in support of the truth—as well as in exposing a modern heresy that is beginning.

the Empire. One would think in reading the tin-whistle efforts of "A Reader," and this self-heralded lady somebody that the Rev. Mr. Moyer was merely an isolated orthodox crank, who was ignorant alike of the Scriptures, and through "laziness" to "investigate" of the "spiritual" nature and value of the divine inspiration of the Holy of the "spiritual" nature and value of Scriptures.

The letters of "Reader" and Mrs. And the sound of a vanished hand. And the sound of a voice that is still, and who might be persuaded to reson to a dark-room haunt for relief, if the loved one gone before would be like to return to earth from the glories of the divine inspiration of the Holy of the "Reader" and Mrs. And the sound of a vanished hand. and through "laziness" to "investigate" of the "spiritual" nature and value of the subject he was discussing. It does sound a little audacious, Mr. Editor and reader, to have such people attribute ignorance to a minister of the gospel in his own special field, and who themselves misquote and misinterpret the same Scripture at every turn. This in itself puts them without the pale in any intelligent discussion. If these "wise" people are as alert in following the trend of current public discussion on this present-day fad and seductive fallacy as they affect to believe Rev. Moyer is ignorant, they must know that his criticism is in line with the most severe and uncompromising articles appearing both in English and Canadian papers and magazines. As representing Canadian sentiment lets these people look up a scorching expose of this wartime craze in a recent issue of the Montreal Standard.

Among recent articles appearing in the English press I wish to quote briefly from two that appear to me to be outstanding and of special importance as the writers are men of national reputation. The first is from the pen duthority on mental malades, and whose strictures are indorsed by that great organ of medical opinion, the London Lancet. He says in part:

"Amateur and biased inquirers into the subject are as a rule quite unaware that if they would meet those who are hearing messages from spirits every hour of the day, who are seeing forms angelic and human surrounding them that are invisible to ordinary persons, and who are receiving other manifestations of an equally "occult" nature, they only require to go to a medical hospital to find them. If honest medical property is a Bedlamite or a moral pervert, with the cachings, evidenced by the fact that eachings, evidenced by the fact that eachings, evidenced by the fact that every passage they cited, though punctuated with quotation marks, we wrome. Hear "Reader": "The inspiration of all men who write or wrote as the writers are men of national reputation. The first is from the pen of all men who write or wrote as the writers are men of national reputation. The first is from the pen of all men who write or wrote as the writers are men of national reputation. The first is from the pen of all men who write or wrote the Bible." And that its not denying the divine inspiration of the Bible!

My second indictment was that the teachings of spiritism are not only unmoral, but definitely immoral. Hear "Reader" again: "Granting for the sake of argument that spiritualism is a crime; even though a crime on the hypothesis of the universality of God, the logical conclusion is, God is in the crime of spiritualism also." Again he says: "Spiritualism is divine, whether bad or good, granting sin is divine the crime of spiritualism is divine, whether bad or good, granting or the sake of argument that spiritualism is divine, whether bad or good, granting or the

The Penticostal Mission of Hamilton road, about which some discussion arose on account of a disturbance at one of the meetings lately, held a service last night, but the noise and clamber of which, according to the neighbors, has been prevalent there ever since its initial meeting, was lacking.

Their great concern is now about the returned soldiers, and the local Tory leaders will have to get the information about them.

There are flocks of questions in the local Tory leaders will have to get the information about them.

If honest medical meeting is and clambous them exists and clambous them exists on the pentient on a service last night, but the noise and clambous them exists on the provided as service last night, but the noise and clambous them exists on the provided as service last night, but the noise and clambous them exists on the pentient on a moral per who pear inaudible messages or feel communications without words, or see forms invisible to others, the medical physician accustomed to symptoms is inclined to regard their "gifts" as being, if not morbid, at least closely relating to the manifestations of an equally "occult" nature, they only require to go to a medical hospital to find them. If honest medical physician accustomed to symptoms is inclined to regard their "gifts" as being, if not morbid, at least closely relating to the morb divinity? And yet, this is the thorough-going, orthodox teaching of this spook-wooing cult, and by such a "doctrine of devils" are their lives supposed to be regulated.

A week ago in my sermon I said: "Spiritualism is of the devil." Today, with the utmost deliberation, I write it down as my firm conviction.
