You would not hesitate to pay more than five cents a loaf for bread if it was better than the cheaper kind; of course not. But if the best bread that can be baked is only five cents a loaf—why pay more?

20 Tickets for One Dollar

We supply our bread fresh from the bakery, every day. We sell to private customers at the wholesale price, and do not sell to stores at all. This is one reason why we can sell a cent lower than other bakers. All our trade discounts go to the customer direct, with no middleman's profits. BOMB EXPLODED NEXT CONSULATE

Italian Headquarters Damaged—No One Badly Hurt.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—A bomb was exploded today in the building next to the Italian consulate at Spring and Lafayette streets.

G. Para Forti, the Italian consul-general, was in his office at the time. He was unhurt, as were attendants at the consulate. Buildings in the neighborhood were rocked by the explosion and glass was shattered in the consulate.

Police headquarters is not far from the scene, and the police, headed by Commissioner Woods, were quickly on the spot.

Eye-witnesses gathered in by them said the bomb was thrown from the roof of the six-story tenement at 222 Lafayette street. It exploded in the gutter, and such was its force that windows were shattered all over the neighborhood.

A number of Italian residents were on the street in front of the consulate and all of them were thrown to the pavement. Except for bruises, however, they escaped injury.

One arrest was made. The man an Italian, was taken to headquarters, charged with being implicated in causing the explosion.

CHINA MAY RETURN TO MONARCHICAL GOVT.

Fifteen Out of Eighteen States Vote to Revert to Old System.

PEKING, Nov. 5.—Fifteen of the eighteen provinces of China are said to have voted to revert to a monarchy.

The minister of foreign affairs, Lu Cheng Hsiang, made this statement to M. Obata, secretary of the Japanese legation in explaining why, in his opinion, the government could not legally defer the decision of the people concerning the proposal to re-establish a monarchy. Mr. Obata visited the foreign office and asked Lu Cheng Hsiang to explain more definitely China's reply to the request for postponement of the decision made by Japan, Great Britain, France and Russia. He said Japan was uncertain whether the government still intended to make a speedy change.

The foreign office, he said, contended that the elections already held by China were misinterpreted by reports that a speedy change was contemplated, which the elections already held reached. He assured M. Obata the Chinese government was considering the friendly advice of the powers in the same spirit in which it was offered.

MARCHING TROOPS HARASSED DAILY

"Enemy's" Tricks Were Sly and Showed Great Resourcefulness.

LIKE REAL WARFARE

Soldiers Hiking From Niagara Had to Be Always on Alert.

The big "trek" of the overseas troops from Niagara camp to winter quarters at the Canadian National Exhibition grounds is undoubtedly the most interesting and practically educational training. There is always a vast distinction between the mimic and the real, but the prevailing atmosphere of seriousness, coupled with the enthusiasm of the officers and men, minimizes this and makes imaginative warfare in this instance most interesting. Copeing with the enemy under the familiar topography of permanent camp situations, is superseded by tactical manoeuvres under all conditions, and at all times, made possible by an extended route march and the wide scope is equally advantageous for the advancing force. The whole idea undoubtedly initiates the reason into potential situations that may quite legitimately occur in actual war, and waiting, utilizing every opportunity to harass the advance.

The instructive side of this march is quite apparent by close contact with any of the advancing units and a visit with a battalion en route is indeed illuminating. The experiences of a crack Toronto battalion arriving during the past week are no doubt typical of all and will serve as a sufficient example. Between Niagara and Grimsby a small party of the enemy attacked the rear guard, but after a slight skirmish were successfully repulsed. The first real attack came east of Grimsby where the enemy were encountered over a hundred strong, and an engagement lasting from 7:30 in the evening till early the next morning, ensued. Finally, after varying successes on both sides, the attacking party retired, being driven off on all quarters. Between Grimsby and Hamilton, however, the enemy, by the scouts disclosed a large body of the enemy, ambushed on the wooded side of a mountain, near which the main column would have been passing. Information was communicated by signalling to the column, and they immediately proceeded to the route. At Clarkson, while the column halted for the mid-day meal, scouts sighted the hostile forces, and the enemy were immediately signalled, came forward and opened a fusillade of about fifty shots were fired, the enemy driven off. At Meriton the enemy made a flank attack. The alertness of the scouts, however, was such that seven prisoners, and their loss, were the result.

A particular daring effort of the enemy was frustrated near Port Credit. A number of them succeeded in passing the outposts, in ten motor cars, while the main column had bivouacked. It was very difficult to detect their presence, but they were eventually driven off. Losses were apparently heavy as regards the attacking force, but the enemy's retreat was not without a number of their occupants no doubt quite satisfied with their clever strategy. This particular incident in which this particular battalion encountered the enemy.

On a march of this nature many humorous incidents are bound to occur. One of the funniest was when a number of the men, who were passing the joke on to each other, were brought to a halt by a lieutenant in a company related by the 75th Battalion, the joke being passed on to a young corporal in a company passing down one of the lines late in the evening. The young soldier, passing on the joke, was told by the lieutenant that he was a "bicycle" and "bicycle" was the name of the joke. The young soldier, however, was not to be taken in and he replied, "Ooo goes there" and "oly cripes, sir, when he answered if it weren't the colonel himself."

Another incident is told of an Italian private in B Company of the 74th Battalion, who in performing sentry duty, so far forgot himself, in the excitement of dispatching a number of the enemy approaching, cried:

"Halt! Hands up! Advance, B Company! Charge bayonets!"

The march is prevented from becoming tedious largely by the men themselves by singing, smoking, and eating. They are kept busy and happy. Many of the battalions, aside from the regular patriotic songs, have their own songs of their own, usually composed by one of their men possessed with the originality of the others. The following chorus is quoted from song 7, a great deal on the march by the 75th Battalion, and was composed by a young corporal in A Company. From a literary point of view it is not faultless, but it reflects the fine spirit of rivalry between the different units:

"Gee, ain't the 75th a fine young race, To boast about the 75th is no disgrace; Three big cheers for the boys so true, Hip, hip, hurrah! for the Red, White and Blue."

We have every other regiment skinned a mile, And are going to hold it for a while; Every time on march we will set the pace; Gee! but ain't the 75th a fine young race."

And thus the embryo soldier learns to live a versatile life. Hard work, pleasure, friendship and rivalry are intimately connected with each other, the transition from mirth to combat, unprecedented in Canadian military history, is merely a typical example of the Dominion-wide advancement made in the awakening of Canada from a peace-loving to a bellicose power.

DARKER LONDON BECOMES A CITY OF BEWILDERMENT

Even Citizens Most Familiar With Metropolis Get Lost in Its Inky Streets at Night.

LONDON'S new lighting regulations are apparent everywhere. All locally have complied with the requirements, and London has been made much darker. At night shopskeepers darken their windows. In many cases they put out the window lights, and depend upon the reflection of the inside lights to illuminate their display windows. Suburban windows, back and front, are screened so that only here and there a faint beam of subdued light escapes through close-drawn curtains. The lighting of the streets also gives evidence of further reduction, although the order did not call for a further modification of public lighting. The authorities, however, had not failed to realize the necessity of everyone complying with the order's provisions.

The new lighting still bewilders Londoners most familiar with the metropolis. To find one's way about the streets is as difficult as if a December mist had fallen on the city. Buildings which ought to be familiar look like nothing at all, or else like everything else. "What sense is this?" one man asked in front of one of the hotels in central London. "Then which way lies So-and-so?" (one of London's best-known landmarks) was the next inquiry.

The rush for blinds and curtains was a large store. People in a part of London beseeched the shops for what one blunderingly described as "Zeppelin blinkers." Many of the establishments are sold out of their stock of heavy curtain material, while the larger shops' assistants had to make repeated journeys to the stock-rooms to replenish counter and show-rooms.

The great demand was for dark casement cloths, heavy serge, or plushette curtains, the view being that it was not only cheaper, but also more effective to fix curtains than blinds. Lots of people elected to have dark green or blue blinds, and to their windows, and makers are still busy making and fixing them. One firm has ordered to make and fix 500 blinds at one establishment alone.

The deal correspondent of a local newspaper says: "An idea of the 'darkness' of the new London is not far from the fact that a 'prominent' deal tradesman, 'He went out one night to see the dark streets run into and over at night. So the 'divine' merchant put bells on his legs. They tinkled. People thought he was a bicycle. He got home whole'."

SHE PATIENTLY BORE DISGRACE

A Sad Letter from a Lady Whose Husband Was Disgraced.

How She Cured Him With a Secret Remedy.

"I had for years patiently borne the disgrace, suffering, misery and privations due to my husband's drinking habits. Hearing of your marvelous remedy for the cure of drunkenness, which I could give my husband secretly, I decided to try it. I procured a package and mixed it in his food and coffee, and he soon began to pick up flesh, his appetite for solid food returned, he stuck to his work steadily, and we now have a happy home. After he was completely cured I told him why I had been his saving grace. He had not the resolution to break on his own accord, but he hereby advised all women afflicted as I was to give your remedy a trial."

MUST HAVE WOOL FOR SOLDIERS' SOCKS

To Get That, Money Is Urgently Needed By Sock Fund.

RED CROSS WORK

No Limit to Urgent Call for Well-Knitted Socks.

Hood immortalized the work of the women of other days when he produced the strong and tragic "Song of the Shroud." The labor of the women of today is no less heroic, and the purpose of preserving life in themselves and, perhaps, in their children. Today another writer may arise who will give us the "Song of the Socks," a writer who will give in verse the services the women in war-times have done to the men, who are fighting, by adding to their comfort and relieving their needs thru their gifts of socks. Meantime just a word in plain prose as to this wonderful industry and its conditions as they maintain right at our door. There is scarcely a day but reports are read of socks which go into different theatres of war, and are shipped to the front or to the many hospitals which house the sick and wounded. The number in which the socks are contributed mount up into the thousands even when regarded locally. If an aggregate could be reached for the allies the number would run into the millions. Yet, with all this, the fact remains that there is nothing of which there is so great a dearth, and so continuous a want as these same socks. After all this is not surprising if we consider that men on the march may easily wear out a pair in a day. Men in the trenches are liable to have their feet soaked in wet and mud with no near means of either drying or washing. Then, too, it goes without saying that men in the trenches are likely to be in the trenches. These things being so, it is not difficult to see that even if the supply started out as equipment for the full complement of every few days in order to keep pace with the demand.

The cry of those in command at all this is "socks for my men." Nothing incapacitates a man so much as wet or uncomfortable feet. If these members are either wet or sore their owner is at once to a certain extent out of commission, and when we think of the army of the front, and of the giving their lives for us, and of the morally speaking we have just as much obligation to be in their places and they here, the thought ought to make us every day more and more determined that those men are not going to suffer in their socks. The Ontario Red Cross Sock Fund, of which Mr. Alexander McPhedran, of 151 Bloor street west, is convener, is in need of money to buy wool. Since 12,192 this organization has sent out 1,219,192 socks for the front. Now, ready to multiply their service of knitting, but there is no material for them to work upon. To keep up the supply it requires about $250 a week. Private friends, are helping to buy wool, but the schools have a deal, but the necessity still exists more and more pressing every day to continue so until the end of the war.

This fact warns us that we must not be of well-doing, but must work cheerily and as the brave men are doing overseas. Who will help by sending something to Mr. McPhedran at above address. Anything sent will be acknowledged and gratefully accepted, and the knowledge of the men, perhaps, saving them from the perils of the disease just as insidious as the German's, ought to be a compensation sufficient for any sacrifice made in the giving.

RECRUITING RALLY IN MASSEY HALL

Empire Club to Hold Great Demonstration on Tuesday Evening.

Tuesday next promises to be a memorable day in the work of recruiting in Toronto and in Massey Hall in the evening, will probably prove the most enthusiastic demonstration ever held in Canada. Dr. Albert Har, president of the Empire Club, conducted a program of splendid attractiveness. It will be featured by the presence of the National Chorus, 200 strong, and rendered interesting by the addition of a special orchestra of thirty members under Mr. Frank Blachford. The national anthem of the allies will be given by "Le Marcellaise," as a solo by Miss May Wilkinson, and a new recruiting song by Mr. Edward Wodson, secretary of the Empire Club, set to music by Dr. Har, and entitled, "Canadians, Follow the Drum."

The speech of the evening will be made by Sir Isaac Hughes, K.C.B., and a vote of thanks will be proposed by Hon. W. H. Hearst, prime minister of Ontario, and seconded by Chief Justice Sir William Mulock. The returns of the tag day recruiting collections will be announced, and a collection will be taken up to add to the recruiting fund, there being no charge for admission.

Brain Amputation

One of the wonders of surgical science has been performed in a French military hospital, where a wounded soldier has had a sixth of his brain amputated without missing it. The patient was carried in with a penetrating wound in the occipital region of the cranium. Splinters of bone had penetrated to form in the left cerebral hemisphere. They were removed by Dr. A. Guépin, surgeon-in-chief of the hospital, but a fresh abscess formed. The patient was obliged on two occasions to amputate portions of the brain which protruded from the wound. The patient thus lost at least a third of the left hemisphere, but shows no apathy, sensibility, or ideation.

GERMANS AGAIN CROSS STRIPA, SAYS BERLIN

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—(By Wireless to Bayville). The Austro-German forces in Galicia are said by the war office to have won further victory over the Russians. In the fighting along the Stripa River. The Russians were thrown back to their old positions on the eastern bank of the river. In the recent fighting there 50 officers and 6000 Russians have been captured.

The army of General Von Linsingen captured further Russian positions northeast of Budka. Russian attempts to win back the German lines on the Dvinsk front were futile. Concerning the western front, the war office says that in the Champagne, north of Arras, the French were ejected by means of hand grenades, from a portion of a German trench which they had entered.
