

ATLANTA SCHOOLS MAY HAVE TO CLOSE

Banks Refuse to Loan Teachers' Salaries on Moral Pledge

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 18.—The city's public schools may be forced to close for the rest of 1926, unless a last minute plan adopted is successful in raising $500,000 to cover the cost of operation.

The revenue is exhausted and the salaries of teachers for September have not been paid. The teachers have remained on duty, however, as the Mayor, members of City Council and business men have sought to adopt a plan to raise the needed revenue.

Under the city charter the city cannot borrow funds which it cannot pay back before the end of the year, and all funds to be received from all sources this year already have been allocated.

The Atlanta Clearing House Association, which includes the five largest banks in the city, has refused to lend the money to the city or the schools on a moral pledge from the City Council that the funds will be repaid in 1927. The banks also have refused to lend money against certificates of salaries, which it was planned to give teachers in lieu of money. They point out that these also are illegal, and any taxpayer could stop payment on them by appealing to the courts.

The banks for the last several years have been lending the city sufficient money to tide the schools over, and each year have issued warnings that they would not continue to do so.

Two Sentenced To Ten Years; One Is Glad

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Harold Wallace, of 320 East 199th street, and Harry Scuppin, of 814 Cortlandt avenue, the Bronx, were each sentenced to ten years in Sing Sing by Judge Cohn in the Bronx County Court after they had pleaded guilty to burglary.

They admitted they had entered the radio shop of Archibald Scholer, 3409 Third avenue, the Bronx, in July. Scuppin told Judge Cohn he was glad of the chance to go to prison as he had been threatened because he had given advance information about a contemplated jail break in the Bronx in 1924.
