He re-affirmed the statement made in these dispatches. In a dictated statement he traversed the efforts made by Spain to induce Germany to head a European movement against the United States, which met with refusal, and continued:
"We were informed from Washington

Speech Delivered by Premier in London Last Night-The dostile Feeling in Ireland.

London, Feb. 5 .- Lord Salisbury unveiled a life-size marble statue of the late Queen Victoria at the Junior Conservative club to-night. Speaking at a dinner after the unveiling, the Premier referred to the recent Dutch note in a tone, for him, of unusual flippancy.

Lord Salisbury said that doubtless some of his auditors thought it a bit of luck to catch a cabinet minister and extract from him some information con-cerning that abortive crisis which had lately filled columns in the newspapers. The speaker said he doubted, however, if they would extract much. For himself, he was unable to imagine the object of the Dutch government, for whose feelings he had the greatest admiration, but he could not see the precise object they hoped to gain by this curious step. "It was clear that the Dutch," continued Lord Salisbury, "had no authorization from our enemies on the Contin-ent; since from the moment this action on the part of the Netherlands government was announced these enemies vied with each other in declaring the Dutch action to be undesired." The Premier explained that his only reason for alluding to such things was that a time was coming when the people must think more of suggestions of their intelligence and less of the suggestions of their emotions. "There is no longer any question of sentiment," continued Lord Salisbury. "We have entered upon a matter of business which we must push through, What we are now seeking is security. Any peace which recognizes the rights of the sovereign and gives us security for the Empire we should accept not only with willingness, but with delight. It is useless to tell us to behave so as to leave a pleasant recollection in the minds of those with whom we are fighting. The only reason that can compen-

But when the present strain had pass-ed away, continued the speaker, there would still remain duties which could not be shirked. The existence of hostile feeling in Ireland was a signal that the effort, upon which depended in no light degree the glory and continuance of the Empire, must not be relaxed. "The maintenance of our position in Ireland is the most vital object the Empire has, and it can only be attained by strenuous exertions," said the Premier The Premier asked if the Irish people loved the government better than they did formerly, and replied to himself that they did not. He said the feelings of hostility which had been expressed were more uncompromising than any expres sions which had ever issued from the lips of Parnell or O'Connell.
