28th September to 4th October, 1904. The week opened on the 28th ult. with an have a church directory placed in each important storm area centred off Vancouver Island, which was causing -a southerly gale on the Washington coast and general rainfall on this Island and the Lower Mainland, the weather conditions presenting the first indications of the approach of the Pacific Coast. A change for the better, however, took place, and an extensive high barometer area developed and quickly spread over British Columbia, the pressure at the same time remaining low in California and the adjoining states. This in the lecture room of the church on the change continued in force throughout the week and resulted in a pleasant continuance of the previous fine weather. The rainfall, though light in the lower part of the province, was very welcome; in the upper portion of the country the fall was much heavier, reaching 1.92 inches at Barkerville and 2.28 inches at Port Simp-son. A good deal of fog was reported, which somewhat interfered with navigation on the Straits. The temperature has been moderate in this section, although sharp frost occurred in Cariboo. At Dawson the temperature fell to 14, the maximum only
