Don't Marry
Perfect ManFutility of Looking for a Paragon Illustrated by Ottawa Preacher.

Special to The Standard.
Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 26.—"If you succeed in finding a perfect man, one who is the personification of all the virtues, and who may not be accused of a fault, for God's sake—don't marry him," said Rev. C. K. Wincott in the course of a sermon.

"Do not consider an alliance with a perfect man—for there is no such person," said Rev. Mr. Wincott. "Imagine what a companion you would make for an angel." There had been one perfect couple, and they had "said down the banks of Eden together." He counselled young ladies not to marry men of bad habits, in the hope of "reforming them." If a man had been addicted to bad habits for 25 or more years there was small chance of his being reformed. Let the reformation come before thought of marriage was entertained, he said.

"It is not a question of addition to wine and whiskey nowadays, so much as to wood alcohol and strychnine," said Rev. Mr. Wincott. "There are many men who are married to their occupations," such as money making. Marry a man who is a fortune in himself," he said. "If a man has nothing but money, then he is poor indeed. But if a man possesses good character, then he is rich indeed."

"Every cradle contains an affinity to some other cradle," said Rev. Mr. Wincott. "They may be at the end of the earth, but something which the world calls 'fate,' and which is called 'Providence' by the church, will bring them together." He bitterly assailed "matrimonial advertisements." "Better to put your head in a lion's mouth, or to take a glass of Paris green, than to pay attention to the wiles of these villains and lepers."

"There are imbeciles and scoundrels who are positively angelic before marriage, but who show their true characters when they have entered matrimony. Better for a woman to live alone for 5,000 years than to marry one of these masculine failures," he said. The husband of a woman whose proper sphere in life was a state of celibacy. They had misadventures to perform, as had Florence Nightingale, Grace Darling and Edith Cavell. Rev. Mr. Wincott urged that there should be profound deliberation before young ladies consented to marry. "They have a right to choose from the men before," he said. "The mannikins that infest our cities should not be considered, as there are so many real men available."

Woolen Petticoats
Back To LondonGarment Has Been Improved
Till Grandmothers Would Hardly Know It.(Special Correspondence Cross-Atlantic Newspaper Service, Inc.)

London, Nov. 26.—The woolen-knit petticoat is with us again. It hails from Paris and is unlike the heavy, clumsy and hideous garment, usually done in red and grey, which our grandmothers wore, that one might readily doubt any relationship. It comes in the palest shades of shell-tint wool, as light and airy as a cob-web. Round the top is a crocheted stitch of silk, and it has a shirred strap of soft satin ribbon in the same shade.

Speaking of petticoats, taffeta is a favorite material, but many women prefer the new crepe-de-chine garments, made plain to the hips, and finished thereupon with a deep accord-implicated flounce. These are very graceful and clinging, and most suitable to the present slim outline. They are usually priced from $12 to $20, and are shown in many attractive colors. Soft shot satin is the medium of a pretty and less expensive petticoat.

The fashionable shops are making display of the new scarlet leather handbags. There are all shapes and sizes, from a quite unadorned bag with inner compartments to a small and dainty pochette. Lined either with scarlet-moire or soft-white kid, they are equally charming. A clasp of mother-of-pearl is a favorite finishing touch, though some have a quaint little Chinese figure in silver.

Lama crepe is one of the favorite new materials for making very attractive nightgowns, in pink, pale blue, or mauve. They are fashioned with flared sleeves, with hemstitched borders, and are priced at $8 to $10. A nice nightgown, prettily trimmed with lace insertion and feather stitchings and comfortable, costs only about $5.

Corn Hill

Corn Hill, Nov. 26.—The Young Ladies' and Young Men's organized skating party Monday evening when they and other friends spent some time at Branscombe's Pond and Nightingale, Grace Darling and Edith Cavell. Rev. Mr. Wincott urged that there should be profound deliberation before young ladies consented to marry. "They have a right to choose from the men before," he said. "The mannikins that infest our cities should not be considered, as there are so many real men available."

A Black Fox ranch has recently been started here by Mr. Naman Hughes, of Petticoat and Mr. Frank Hughes of this place.

Friends of Mrs. M. J. Burdick will be pleased to hear of the slight improvement in her condition. Mr. Percy Keith, who has spent the past few months in the Canadian West, was the over-Sunday guest of Mr. and Mrs. George Keith.

REFLECTIONS OF A BACHELOR GIRL

By HELEN ROWLAND

(Copyright, 1920, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

Repartee: A gallon of words to a spoonful of thoughts.

There is as much difference between truly loving and just "being in love," as there is between being good and "getting religion."

Marriage is the door, by which a woman escapes from work, from spinsterhood, from loneliness; by which man escapes from hisself, or from a lot of other women. If you want to see the bright side of it, stop thinking of what you are going to get by marrying, and begin thinking of what you are going to escape.

It takes one woman twenty years to bring up her son—and another woman all the rest of his life to bring him down a little.

What a man doesn't know may not trouble him; but what a woman doesn't know causes her untold agony, until she finds it out.

Sometimes, it seems to a woman, that the only way to get any flattery, or flowers from her husband is to lie down and die.

Some men are born for marriage; some achieve marriage; but all of them live in the deadly fear that marriage is going to be thrust upon them.

The thing that first shocks and then wearies a man about marriage is the discovery that a woman expects him to "win" her all over again every day.

When woman invented clothes she invented romance; and every time she cuts her frock an inch lower, or trims her skirts an inch wider, she is inventing romance.

The trouble in most unhappy marriages is that the man expects too much—and the woman suspects too much.

EVERYDAY CREATURES
MAKE AN INTERESTING
STUDY BY NATURALISTShowing the Interest in the Life at Our Doors—Case of a Baby Rat Reared by Cat.

Miss Frances Pitt has for some years shown herself one of the keenest, most interesting, and most successful of field naturalists, and her recent issue of "Wild Creatures of Garden and Hedge" is distinctly the best nature book in the home field that recent months have seen. We give Professor Arthur Thompson's recent review from "Nature," which, with inimitable skill, brings out the fine character of the book.

"Miss Frances Pitt has given us a delightful book of personal observations on the everyday creatures that may be met with in garden, meadow, and hedge—mice, birds, frogs, toads, and other animals that every person comes across. She records what she has seen and learned, and is plainly an observer of experience and insight. She shows the interest of the life at our doors, and makes it clear that there is a great deal still to be discovered. Her book is to be strongly recommended for young people, not only because of its interest and simplicity of style, but also because of its scientific temper."

The Ways of the Bat
The book begins with bats, which are bundles of peculiarities and puzzles. Let us take an example of Miss Pitt's method. When a bat hawking in the twilight makes a dash after an insect and catches it, it often apparently tumbles through the air for a foot or two. This is because the bat, having grabbed its insect, bends its head down into its intermembral pouch where its prey cannot escape, and crumple it quickly as the bat goes on flying.

The Thrush and Snails
"Of great interest is the story of a young thrush, which took about a week to learn how to deal with snails."

It was very evident that he learned by experience and that the snail-cracking habit of the thrush is not a specialized instinct, but arises from the tendency of this bird to beat on the ground and thus kill any prey like a big worm that cannot be easily managed. My thrush would beat and hammer something that was at all troublesome or which it did not understand.

"This is the kind of observation that gives a book high value."

Ferocity of Shrews
"Dealing with shrews, Miss Pitt says:—

"It is only by watching these small animals that one can gain any idea of their untiring energy, intense vitality, and their great pugnaciousness. They are perhaps the most quarrelsome creatures in the world! If home and there were as fierce, active and fearless in proportion to their size as shrews and moles are, with their little bodies, what awful creatures they would be!"

"In regard to the death of a large number of common shrews in the autumn, the author favors the theory that these animals are annuals." Here, as in other parts of the book, there is a useful exposure of the nonsense that is often talked about the misery and cruelty of wild nature.

"If to us it seems dreadful that death should always be on the wing for them, it seems almost certain that the small animals enjoy their life to the utmost."

Frogs and Toads.
"We come next to the sympathetic study of frogs and toads. The toad's cry is described as of gold melody."
