WOLVES OF KULTURE

The fourteenth episode of "Wolves of Kulture" shown at the Roma Theatre on Friday and Saturday is a rattling land and water series of perilous situations terminating in a high jump that would have made the famous leaping Steve Brodie hustle for his honors. The episode opens as Alice is about to pull the lever which will connect the switch above and cause the infernal machine at the cave entrance to explode. The guard comes up, points rifle at her, advances. At this moment, a large rock falls from the top of the cave and kills the Hun. Alice escapes just as the other Huns come up to investigate. In the meantime Barclay escapes from the cave and goes for aid. Bob, aboard the yacht, has per- ceived signals from a land flag staff. He swims to land and comes to the sentinel guarding this signal station. He overpowers the spy and goes to the flag staff. In the meantime, Alice has looked about the cave and learned much of the plans to discharge the torpedo. Carter and Walker leave the yacht and come ashore, because of the cessa- tion of the signals. They are at the bottom of the flag staff and have discovered Bob at the top. Carter aims a rifle and shoots at Bob, who makes a thrilling jump to escape being killed. GREAT TYPHOON SCENE One of the most realistic storm scenes ever photographed will be re- vealed in the first episode of Pearl White's new serial "The Lightning Raider" which has been seen at the Star Theatre on Thursday and Friday. Saturday of each week. The first episode is entitled "The Ebony Block" and shifts and moves from New York to the rubber plantations of the up- per Amazon. The plot of the entire serial revolves around an Ebony Block, containing secrets so danger- ous, that in unscrupulous hands it is able to endanger the welfare of the world. This block is in the possession of Wu Fang, an unscrupulous Chinaman of great wealth who owns the rubber plantation on which Tom Norton's father is employed. The elder Norton is in love with a beau- tiful girl—half Chinese and half American, who is being kept as a ward by Wu Fang, who hopes one day to marry her. Norton and Sunbeam, the ward, decide to escape from Wu Fang, and take the Ebony Block with them. While they are on their way through the jungles they are overtaken by Wu Fang and his Chinese henchmen. They are at- tacked and Norton is about to be killed, when the typhoon bursts with such force that the entire party are almost wiped out and Norton and Sunbeam under the cover of the wind and rain, manage to get away. All of the most modern mechanics for the creation of a motion picture storm were employed in the making of this Typhoon which has been declared by experts to be the most realistic ever photographed.

WHEN PINK TURNS TO RED

WATCH OUT
That Happened in Flagg Comedy
That That to the Marines When a pacifist who ordinarily sees pink is kicked hard enough to see red, watch out! That is why Eliot Brainard espoused the cause of his country against the Huns in "Tell That to the Marines" the new Paramount Flagg comedy which will be shown at the Allen theatre next Wed. and Thursday.
Brainard protested against the war spirit in the militant youth of America and got into serious trouble.
Nan Wolcott his fiancée, breaks their engagement because her sweetheart is no man and he goes to the country to escape the war mania.
He finds his former fiancée in the hands of a Hun spy whom she is tracing and the spectacle rouses all his manhood to the degree that he slays the Hun and joins the Marines.
All the pink in his moral vision had happened into red and what he did to the Huns later on may be imagined.
Olin Howland has the chief role in the new comedy while Beatrice Tremaine plays opposite to him.
The comedy has an intensely interesting story and it is a picture that will not only be good entertainment but propagandist value.
The action is speedy and the general support all that could be demanded.

PEARL WHITE IN DIZZY CLIMB

It was on Fifth avenue in New York City, at high noon, during the big drive for the United War Work Fund From Forty second street to Forty fourth the avenue was roped off and speckled with stalwart members of New York's finest. Forty thousand people gazed skyward and held their breath for Pearl White, star of "The Lightning Raider" to whom fear is an unknown quantity, was climbing surely and confidently a 150 foot extension ladder on a Fire Department truck.
When she reached the top, she clung with one hand and waved an American flag with the other. Meanwhile, a score of members of New York's two most famous theatrical clubs the Lesure and Friars expect-madly through the crowd with dish pans and collected bills and silver for the War Workers.
The combined drive of the Lambs and Friars was the result of a bet between George M. Cohan, Abbot of the Friars and Willis Collier, a prominent Lamb, each posting up "a thousand cold" that his club could secure the most cash for the fund.
Miss White climbed the ladder for the Lambs and on that day put them two thousand ahead of their cowed brethren. She had to stop work a day on her latest serial, "The Lightning Raider," but 'twas in a good cause and Pearl didn't mind.
Star, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.
