

Women Will Play Important Part In 1924 Election

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Women voters are to play a more important part than ever in the 1924 campaign in the United States. The women will be paid more attention than ever by the political managers, both republican and democrat.

Both the republican and democratic national committees have already begun systematic organization work among women voters. Efforts are being made to perfect organization by states, counties and smaller subdivisions. Women speakers are being trained by both committees. Both parties have taken up with the plan of having women associated with the national committees. The democrats have made the women fullpledged members of their national committee. The republicans have made them associate members.

Disposition of the women to act independent of parties is proving a difficulty for the party organizers. They are trying to combat this notion of independence.

Life's Repairs

'Tis known to us, too well, 'how the world tires
Ere the week ends: like to an instrument
All out of tune our soul becomes; the fire
Enthusiasm kindled soon are spent.

Like to adventurers in foreign lands,
We start out questing—eager for empire;
We come back often, too, with empty hands,
So courage sickens, and so impulse dies.

But there are hidden sources of repair—
Sleep's curtain'd bower, where o'er us is poured
The healing balm of rest; the fire-side talk;

Approval's word; the quiet, shady walk;
The inn, between the weeks, that silence, where
The Sabbath keeps. 'Tis thus we are restored!

World's Series Attendance and Receipts

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—(A.P.)—The short world's series of 1922, in which the New York Giants won four games and tied one with the New York Yankees, drew 185,947 fans through the turnstiles. They paid $605,475 in admissions.

The record attendance for world's series was set in 1921 when 239,977 persons saw the Giants win from the Yankees in eight games. In 1912, in the eight game series between the Boston Red Sox and the New York Giants, 252,237 fans attended, and in 1910, when Cincinnati defeated the Chicago White Sox, there were 263,938 paid admissions. So while the 1922 attendance was fourth in point of numbers, it set a new record for average attendance.

The fifth and final contest of the series also established a new record for single game receipts for all time, the total "gate" being $128,147.

The following table shows the distribution of the receipts last year:

Team	Share
Contesting players' share	$247,309.71
Purse for New York Nationals	111,239.37
Each of New York Nationals about	4,470.00
Purse for New York Americans	74,192.91
Each N. Y. American player, about	3,325.00
Purse for second place teams	37,096.56
Each second place player about	700.00
Purse for third place teams	24,730.97
Each third place player in American League about	515.00
Each St. Louis and Pittsburgh player of National League about	257.00
(St. Louis and Pittsburgh finished in a tie)
New York National Club's share	41,218.28
New York American Club's share	41,218.28
National League share	41,218.28
American League share	41,218.28
Advisory Council share	72,738.15

DISCUSSES "OUTPORT" BANKS

Carbonate, Sept. 30th, 1915.
(Editor Evening Advocate)

Dear Sir,—I have often pondered the question: "Has the inauguration and gradual increase in the Outport branch-bank policy been a blessing or a curse to this Country?" This to my mind is a question of very real importance, but it is one, nevertheless, that has at no time been debated by our debating societies or discussed through the medium of the Press. I have given the matter a great deal of thought and study, and I have come to the conclusion that a large share of our present financial difficulties, both amongst the smaller business men and planters of the outports, and the larger exporting houses, is directly traceable to the presence of banks in the more important settlements outside St. John's during the past ten or a dozen years. Now, why do I think this is so? It would be impossible in the space that I presume to ask you for in this issue to give in detail the reasons for my opinion in this instance, but I think one or two of them may be stated briefly here.

When the banks doing business in this Country began to extend themselves to the outports they did so with the expressed intention of affording "greater accommodation" to their outport customers. We all know what accommodation from a bank means and many outport business-men and planters know to-day what it means better than they ever expected or desired to know. Bank accommodation to these men or many of them was like a new slide to a school-boy. They simply sat on and let'er go, caring not a rap what dancer might be lurking at the bottom of the hill over which they were speeding. The banks were quite within their rights in according every facility within their gift to those who were satisfied to pledge their last cent's worth of property for "ready cash" with which to try experiments along lines utterly new to them. Because they were afforded this accommodation, brought as it was to their very doors, these outport planters and small business-men in many cases forsook those who had been accommodating them for years, and many of whom were owed large sums of money. They fell victims to the bank-accommodation bug and, having been given rope enough, very naturally hanged themselves. What has been the general result? The larger merchants who for years and years had been the planters' banks were in many cases left in the lurch by men they had treated well, the planters themselves staked their all on bank-accommodation ventures and lost, and the banks, having accepted as security that which turned out to be worthless, also came out on the wrong end. One of the most serious results of the last named happening was that the banks, in an unwise attempt to retrieve losses made in their experiment with the small man, tightened the strings on the bona fide business concerns till they literally strangled them so that, in the final analysis, the sum total of the banks' "greater accommodation" policy has been financial chaos and business stagnation.

Perhaps I have this thing doped out all wrong, and if so I should be grateful to anyone who, having had reason to know more about the matter than I do, will put me right.

Yours truly,
CONSERVATIVE.

No Evidence To Sustain Case Against Dessert

The case against Arthur Dessert for a breach of the Prohibition Act was continued in the Magistrate's Court yesterday and occupied the Court throughout the day. The case for the prosecution, concluded on the day previous and the defense opened yesterday forenoon when Dessert was put in the box and was subjected to a lengthy cross examination by Superintendent O'Neill, in which he denied ever selling liquor to Jarvis. He admitted Jarvis was at his house on Sunday evening, and again on Monday morning, but on the first occasion, he gave him his supper and on Monday morning Jarvis called to have some nails removed from his rubber boots. Accused said that at no time did Jarvis get any drink on his premises. After Dessert's examination was completed William Pearcey was called and admitted seeing Jarvis at the house purchased liquor from Dessert was not substantiated by any independent witness and he therefore dismissed the case.

Particular occasion and swore that no liquor passed between them.

Kenneth McDonald also was next called and saw Jarvis, but did not see him get any liquor. Witness was a neighbor of Dessert's on Casey St. and went to defendant's house on Sunday night to return a pair of opera glasses which had been loaned him by Dessert earlier in the day. He could not say whether Jarvis was drunk or not, but was positive that no liquor was served him in his presence.

Joseph Cook was the final witness. He said that he was also a next neighbor of Dessert's and visited Dessert's house Monday morning when Jarvis was there and it was he who removed the nails from Jarvis's boots.

Jarvis left the house after him. He saw no liquor served Jarvis.

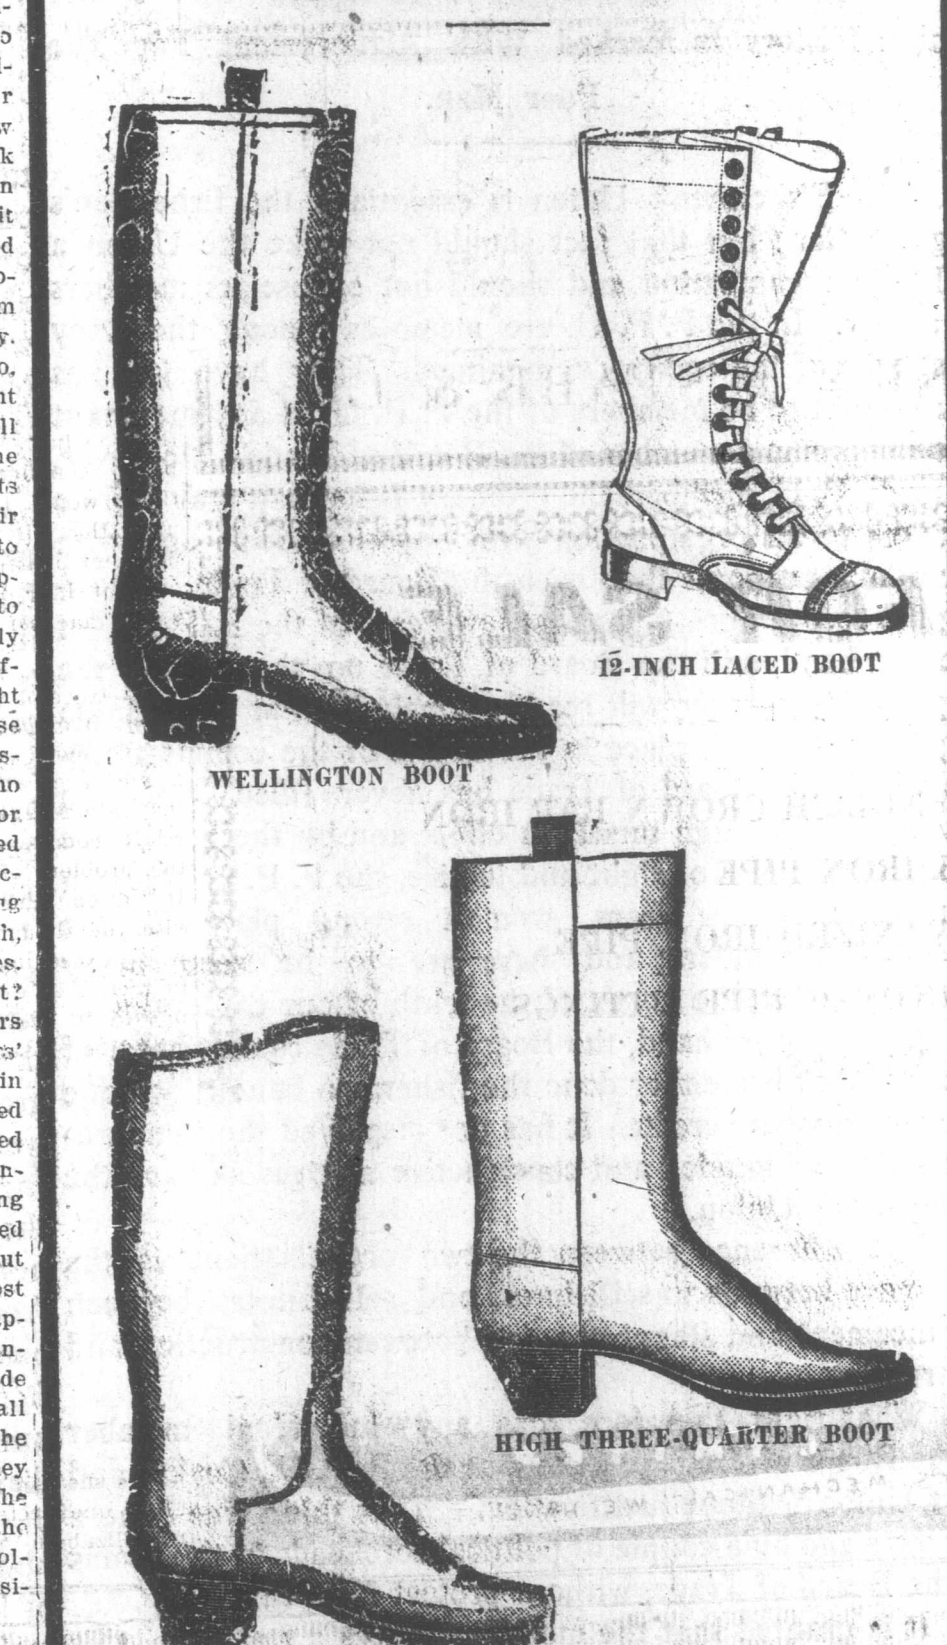

This completed the evidence. In summing up, Judge Morris pointed out that the evidence of Jarvis that he purchased liquor from Dessert was not substantiated by any independent witness and he therefore dismissed the case.
