THE SITUATION.

The offensive of the Allies on the Somme front has come to a halt. Indications are that the French, and British alike, are preparing for another thrust, and meanwhile, of course, the Huns are busy strengthening their defences. The five weeks which have elapsed since this action started, apparently simply constitute the opening chapter of the engagement.

Fierce fighting still continues on the Russian front and the Teutons are making a desperate defence of Kovell. The issue is in doubt.

The French have scored a noted success at Verdun, where they have entirely recaptured the village of Fleury and have also secured a whole system of elaborate defence works.

Hon. A. J. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty, during the course of a review of two years of the war, naturally emphasizes the outcome of the Battle of Jutland. He points out that the engagement was the result of an attempt of the German fleet to break out of their Kiel Canal prison.

They failed and "sank again into impotence." As further proof of this he quotes the continued use of the seas by John Bull for the transport of the ever increasing flow of men and munitions. Referring to the cold-blooded murder of Capt. Fryatt, Mr. Balfour paid a fine tribute to the courage and the resource of the commanders of British merchantmen, and said that in no far from intimidating them, the fate of their confederates would nerve them to all the greater resistance. The Germans were always wrong in supposing that by behaving like brutes they could sow their foes into behaving like cowards.

ONTARIO AND THE WAR.

Today is the second anniversary of the declaration of war, and in this regard the "organization of resources" committee has issued a statement from the Parliament buildings, Toronto, showing in part what the people of Ontario have done in connection with the struggle.

First of all in the matter of men. Enlistments to June 30th, 1916:

Ontario . . . . . 147,158 42.5
All other Provinces . . . . . 198,722 57.5

Total (Canada) . . . . . 345,880 100
Enlistments in Ontario are 5.8 per cent. of total population, 1911 census.

Enlistments in the rest of Canada are 4.2 per cent. total population, 1911 census.

Enlistments in Ontario are 28 per cent. of Canadian and British-born between the ages of 18 and 45 years.

Enlistments in the rest of Canada are 22 per cent. of Canadian and British-born between the ages of 18 and 45 years.

Money contributions from this Province have also been most notable. For three special funds the following amounts can be definitely stated:—

British Red Cross, Trafalgar Day, Oct. 21, 1915. Ontario, $1,514,000; rest of Canada $370,000.

Canadian Red Cross (cash only) Sept. 1st, 1914-May 31, 1916. Ontario, $964,865; rest of Canada $624,788.

Canadian Patriotic Fund to June 30, 1916 (approx.) Ontario, $5,000,000; rest of Canada $7,000,000.

Not to mention flour, fruit, etc., supplied in large quantities to French, Serbian, Belgian, Armenian and Polish relief funds, a great deal of money has also been raised for the purchase of machine guns, for aviation, for hospital ships, soldiers' comforts, etc., but for these also no figures are available, though it is safe to say that approximately one million dollars has been supplied for these purposes.

Further, a very large amount of money has been donated by citizens and by county, town and city councils, as well as by the Provincial Government, for the purpose of aiding overseas battalions to finance recruiting campaigns and to purchase equipments not provided by the Dominion Government. The sum total donated in this way would probably aggregate one million dollars.

All this makes excellent reading with regard to duties well met, but there are others still facing the Province:—

1.—The giving of still more eligible men for overseas service.

2.—The giving of still larger amounts to the Patriotic and Red Cross funds, as the number of our men in the field increases.

3.—The war has cost Canada to date between $250,000,000 and $275,000,000, as compared with the $36,000,000 per day outlay of the Old Land. Canadians should see to it that they subscribe for their own war loans.

4.—In order to have Patriotic aid war loan money, we should all strive to produce up to capacity.

5.—Every available worker should realize that all must serve.

6.—There must be hearty co-operation.

7.—The soldiers returning from the front must be looked after in every possible way, and preparations be made to receive a large influx of immigrants.

KING GEORGE'S MESSAGE TO CAPT. FRYATT'S WIDOW
London, Aug. 4.—King George has sent a letter of sympathy to the widow of Captain Fryatt in Brussels, who was executed recently by the Germans on the charge that he tried to ram a German submarine when he was master of the steamer Wrexham. In his letter King George says: "The action of Captain Fryatt in defending his ship (the Wrexham) was a noble instance of the resource and self-sacrifice characteristic of his profession." The letter adds that King has learned with the deepest indignation of Captain Fryatt's fate and that the King regards the outrage with abhorrence."
