We ellently stole out of harbor into weather of the usual type we have been enduring inkely-cold, drizziling rain, with heavy mist; in lact, an ideal February rather than a July morning. Anything lose propitious for our proposed firing exercises could hardly be imagined, and no doubt the man left behind in the rest of the fleet felt relieved to think that it was the flagship's show, and not theirs.

However, as the great Dreadnought glided along in her usual noiseless shalless along in her usual noiseless shalless as to stoody twelve knots, with only one bolier-room working; I had a grand spportunity fer inspecting under the best conditions the initiation of the stokehold, which was in full blast—literally so, for it needed considerable strength to push the door open against the summense rath of air.

I went prepared to find the same terrifie conditions of labor obtaining that I have noted in other battleships, and I was most agrossibly surprised. For I could have stayed separably and the dirt reduced to a minimum. In real, I did my whole tour this morning to supplied the first reduced to a minimum. I was not a little stunned, but shot followed shot, sometimes beneath my feet, sometimes in the other turret, until sixteen of those vast projectiles had sped on their way.

The 'cease fire' sounded much to my relied, and I found that two minutes and three-quarters had elapsed. As to the effect agon me of this bombardment I say nothing, and I might exhaust all, my adjectives without giving you an idea of the might and majesty of the whole performance. But one little detail will perhaps be more illumitating. My room is an apartment about thirty feet long on the opposite side of the ship to that where the guns were fired, and also at the other end. It runs fore and aft, opening into a thwartship passage at the after end and into the ward-room forward.

recoss was lifted off the nests of drawers and twisted sidoways. Noting this I am amazed to find how small is the amount of damage done by the rapid and continuous firing of these moneter guns. A large proportion of the shots fired—twenty-three in number—went clean through the centres of small squares on canvas, 15 feet by 14 feet, representing the targets, and all the rest auneared to me to be absolutely in line with them, striking the water dither tust before or fust helpind the object. What You Don't See in Edinburgh. What You Don't See in Edinburgh.

There is one thing that always disappoints the visitor to Edinburgh, and that is a complete absence of kitle-or rather the absence of Scotsman in kitle. It you meet a man wearing a kilt in the street of the Queen City of the Forth it will be a grave mistake to suppose that he is the Laird of Gormuck or some other equally famous Highland chieltain. He is nothing of the sort. As a matter of fact, his name is Hodgkins, and he is employed during eleven months of the year licking up envelopes for the firm of Eisenstein & Ritsheimer on the shady side of Lothbury avenue, E. C.

Another mistake which strangers are apt to make lies in supposing that the good people of Scotland talk Scotch. I shall never forget my surprise on the occasion of my to make lies in supposing that the good people of Scotland talk Scotch. I shall never forget my surprise on the occasion of my first visit to Edinburgh when a policeman at the corner of Frederick street, to whom I remarked pleasantly that it was "braw, brient nicht the nicht, whateifer,' told me to push off and stop asking him conundrums. Scotchmen do not as a rule talk at all. They peases the gift of silence to a really remarkable degree. I know a gille named Donald who lives in Perbabire in whose society I have sometimes spent whole days stalking the elusive stag without his ever vouchsafing a single remark of any kind. I remonstrated with him, once pointing out that such silence as his almost amounted to tactiturnity. He promised to try and cultivate a certain measure of garrulity, and after we had walked across the heather for five hours, during which time I could see that his brain was working feverishly, he suddenly turned to me and exclaimed, "Yon's a fearful earthquake they had in Jamaical" after which striking and excisimed, "Yon's a fearfu' earthquake they had in Jamaical' after which striking effort he relapsed once more into his ha-bitual attitude of respectful silence.—Lon-don Tailer.

Holland Sea Signals.

Holland seems to be pioneering a new development of sea signals which may ender coast lightships of double utility to vessels in times of fog. At a point of the North Sea northeast of Texel Island is moored the Dutch lightship Haaks, is moored the Dutch lightship Haars, which for some days now has been equipped with a novel system of submarine signals by means of sunken bells. In fog, snow or hail, or whenever from any cause the weather is judged "thick" enough, these bells can be sounded once avery three seconds. The saytem has every three seconds. The saytem has been installed as a practical working test, and if the results are deemed to be good enough it will be adopted generally on all Dutch lightships—perhaps also on those of Belgium.—From the London Globe.

Electric Clock at Berlin Enjoys a Unique Distinction. This is said to be the electric clock in the basement of the Berlin Observatory, which was installed by Professor erster in 1865. It was inclosed in an rocester in 1605. It was introduced in air-tight glass cylinder, and has frequently run for periods of two or three months with an average daily deviation of only 15-1000 of a seco ond.

Yet astronomers are not satisfied even with this, and efforts are made continually to secure ideal conditions for a clock by keeping it not only in an air-tight case, but in an underground vault where neither changes of temperature nor of barometric pressure shall ever affect it.

The Teddy Bear destroys the instinct of otherhood in little girls.—Interview with

She put me away last summer, and told me she didn't care;
She was weary of lips like cherries, and pink cheeks and golden hair;
She had fallen in love, she whispered, with a "cute" little Teddy Bear!

So, I've waited here in the darkness at her Highness' commands;
Oh, the hours I've spent in longing for the touch of her baby hands!
For e'en though she loves another, she holds me in iron bands.

If my rival was only handsome I would never shed a tear,
But ugh, that horrid monster, that never would let come near.
Oh, the thought of that Bear and her Highness is driving me mad, I fear.

But I hope some bright, bright morning, she will turn to her love of old,
And the Teddy Bear's place wil be taken by her dolly's head of gold;
And the arms of her loving Highness will my waiting arms enfold!

How It Works.

(Philadelphia Record.) A couple of years ago England produced the biggest war vessel in the world, and at once we and the Japanese made plans to produce others a little bigger. Now England is planning to build one of 30,000 tons, more than 50 per cent, bigger than the Dreadnought; and already our naval officers are figuring on one of 40,000 tons, and Japan may be trusted to build one of 42,000 tons. Thus the effort to carry out the Roosevelt plan and assure perpetual peace by having a navy big enough to scare everybody else out of fighting is continually defeated.
