

ROYAL Yeast Cakes

BEST YEAST IN THE WORLD.
DECLINE THE NUMEROUS INFERIOR
IMITATIONS THAT ARE BEING OFFERED
AWARDED HIGHEST HONORS AT ALL EXPOSITIONS
E.W. GILLET COMPANY LIMITED
WINNIPEG TORONTO MONTREAL

PLOTS THAT FAILED

He always sent for the old housekeeper in just that summary manner when there was anything on his mind that troubled him.

"Do you know who the caller is in the drawing-room, whom the girls are entertaining?" he queried, brusquely.

"It is Mr. Downing, sir," she replied. "I thought so, from the glances I caught of him coming up the stoop," he said, more to himself than to her, in a very irritated voice.

For a moment he was silent, as though undecided as to whether he should free his mind on the subject uppermost in it or not; at length he appeared to cast scruples to the winds, and turning to the old housekeeper, he began slowly and emphatically:

"I do not like that young man, Mrs. Mack. No doubt you can readily understand why."

"You mean he is a chip of the old block," remarked the old housekeeper, seriously.

"Exactly," he replied, tersely. "I never knew good of the father, and I know him well, and the son was my horror of a boy, he was so much of a rascal in his youth. The tales I have heard from him while at college strengthened by poor opinion of him. By that I mean I gradually thought worse of one whom I had commenced by thinking bad of, as the old saying goes."

The old housekeeper rather divined what was coming, though she made no comment, listening in respectful silence for him to continue.

"I considered the advisability of inviting him to Bab's party long and earnestly," he continued, and after another long pause, he went on:

"I understand that he monopolized Bab completely, much to the annoyance of other young fellows, dancing every dance with her, I am informed, and he is following it up by calling here to-day. I do not like it, Mrs. Mack; in short, a stop must be put to it before mischief is done. Bab is very young, and, therefore, very impressionable. She does not know him from gold. She will be apt to fall head over ears in love with this young man if he is not forbidden the house."

"I think you are worrying yourself unnecessarily, sir," smiled the old housekeeper. "The young man may have danced with our Bab, as you say, sir, but Miss India is the great attraction which brings him here to-day. I happen to know that."

"How do you know, Mrs. Mack?" he questioned, anxiously.

"From Miss India's own lips, sir, she confessed as much to me when she told me that he was to call upon her and wonder if you would care."

"Certainly not, if it is really India whom he cares for. I-I had every reason to suppose it was Bab."

"The two girls went down to receive him together, sir, as was quite natural; this being Bab's home, Miss India felt that she should accompany her down to the drawing-room. She asked me if I did not think Bab ought not to consent to do this, and I replied: 'Certainly she will if you request her to do so.' Miss India, though the child is not much better than a big baby, and cannot assist you much, she neither sings nor plays, and her conversation is as likely as not to be about dolls or toys."

"Mr. Haven smiled faintly.

"You are quite right, Mrs. Mack," he said. "I see that my fears led me a little forward, still, it is best to err on the side of caution, if I err we must. I think he is as undesirable a companion for my niece as for my daughter, and I shall tell India so, and give her my reasons if she goes much further. Still, no matter what came of it, I would not be justified in laying down the law to India as I would to Bab."

"That is quite true, sir, these foreign-bred take strange notions, and will brook no interference, even from those nearest and dearest to them people say."

"Quite true," he murmured. "Still, although India and Bab are nearly the same age, India is decidedly a young woman, and knows what she wants, while Bab is only a child. I can but give India my advice and will have to let it go at that. I had prepared quite a lecture for you to give to Bab, as women understand those delicate affairs so much better than men, but if India is the attraction, I shall not say a word."

"I know Mr. Haven was a cold, very high estimation of the world, and would be pretty out to read his character in his face. His past shortcomings had left indelible marks upon his countenance that he never seemed quite able to effectually conceal."

He would have given much for the handsome, frank, open countenance of his chum, Clarence Neville, whom man, woman and child always took to on sight. The beautiful India Haven received him graciously. Bab was very shy. She could not help thinking, to save her life, all that her cousin had whispered to her the night before about this handsome young man being so desperately in love with her. She wished to goodness that she had not known it. As it was, she could have cried with shame, she was so awkward in every speech and action.

Rupert Downing was so madly in love with her that he did not even notice her mistakes, she was so beautiful to gaze upon, and he was so completely infatuated with her.

India could scarcely repress a sneer as she looked on. The time was when she herself had been madly in love with this handsome debonaire American, Rupert Downing, and would have considered the world well lost for his sake, but he had laughed at her as though it were a great joke that she should shower her affection upon him, and his contempt had stung her to the passionate woman of her race, her love had turned to the deadliest hatred. That was why she could look on so calmly and see him devote himself to another, and that other scarcely more than a schoolgirl and with the beauty of a pink and white baby.

While he devoted himself to Bab, almost forgetting her very presence, India wove her plans of deadly vengeance against him as well as Bab, but Rupert Downing was unconscious of it. His worship of little Bab seemed to fairly border on idolatry.

And Barbara Haven was too innocent to realize the havoc she was making in his heart.

While India played soft, dreamy music upon the piano he sat and talked to Bab, and thus occupied, he forgot all time, everything save the rare, wonderful beauty of the lovely young girl opposite him.

He talked to her, not as he would have talked to old society girls, of music, art and travel, but only of poetry, to awaken the fund of beautiful romance which he knew must be locked up within her breast.

"Let me read a few lines that I cut out from a magazine at home and brought over especially to read to you, Miss Barbara, if—if you would care to listen to it."

"I do not object at all; on the contrary, I should be pleased," she declared.

Slowly he took from his breast pocket a folded slip of paper.

"There are two poems on this page," he said, "and if I have your permission when I have finished the first you shall hear the second as well."

In a low, modulated voice he began slowly:

"Some day upon the highway going,
Or on the hilltop or on the plain,
We see a face without our knowing,
And life is never the same again."

"We hear a voice that thrills our being
With nameless yearnings, speechless pain;
Our souls are quickened into being,
And life is never the same again."

"The past has vanished as in vision,
With all its shadows, clouds and rain;
We enter upon paths ethereal,
And life is never the same again."

His voice died away in almost a sob. He turned to Barbara, whispering, huskily:

"Up to last night I would have passed over those words lightly had I come across them. Now they are invested with a new, sweet, subtle meaning. They express the feelings of one who has met his or her ideal—the one person in the world who has—"

He did not have time to finish his sentence, for at that moment Mr. Haven entered to take a hurried leave of his daughter, Bab, India and their caller, Mr. Downing.

Something very like a frown deepened on his face as his quick eyes took in the fact that the young man was in earnest conversation with Bab and utterly oblivious to India's presence, who sat at the piano alone.

"There is one thing which is positive," thought Mr. Haven, "that is, he shall not have my daughter, no matter how much he admires her. I fancy that the wealth that she will inherit is quite as much of a magnet in his eyes as the girl herself, for by the way he is living, his own money will not last any too long, but he shall never replenish his coffers at my expense nor my Bab's."

He could do no more than greet the young man coldly, though there was added to it a certain stiffness and coldness of demeanor which he intended Mr. Rupert Downing should notice.

He had but a moment to remain. As he took his leave hurriedly, he glanced the two girls and bowed his adieu distantly to their companion.

Rupert Downing noticed, with a flush of annoyance, that he did not extend to him the invitation to call again.

"In his hurry he may have forgotten to do so," he thought. "He would give him the benefit of the doubt."

India saw at a glance that her uncle was none too well impressed with Rupert Downing and she knew he would never be able to gain the daughter without the father's consent.

He had selected Bab's future husband and now save Clarence Neville would find favor in his parental eyes. India thought a great deal more on the subject, too, and a strange smile played over her lips as her fingers toyed idly with the white ivory keys.

CHAPTER XV.

Rupert Downing was too diplomatic to make his call a lengthy one. He would not stay too long on this occasion lest Bab should grow weary of him; he had made a good impression; he must be satisfied with that for the time being; he depended much upon India's putting in a good word for him after he had gone.

He walked slowly home through the rain, saying to himself that it was the first day of his life that he had been completely happy. It had been a glimpse of Paradise to him. He would have given his life for fair, golden-haired Barbara Haven.

In the short hours that had elapsed since he had met her he seemed to have concentrated his very existence on the mad desire of winning her.

He was frightened at the intensity of his passion. It had come to this—he would rather have seen her lying dead at his feet than the bride of another man on earth.

His friend, Clarence Neville, wondered what made him so very pleasant and agreeable during the evening that fol-

HAIR CAME OUT IN HANDFULS

Scalp in Very Bad Condition. Dandruff Could be Seen Plainly. Lost Most of Hair. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment Cured.

42 Lippincott St., Toronto, Ontario.—"About a year ago I had a very bad attack of typhoid and my scalp was in a very bad condition. The dandruff could be seen plainly and I lost most of my hair. My hair fell out gradually, but after having it shampooed it came out in handfuls. I used Cuticura Soap to shampoo my hair, then rubbed the Cuticura Ointment into the scalp. The dandruff was very soon removed and my hair stopped falling out. Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me." (Signed) Miss E. Chamberlain, Mar. 31, 1912.

HANDS COVERED WITH ECZEMA

Anse du Cap, Quebec.—"About one year ago my daughter had her hands covered with eczema. It broke out in a rash. She was unable to put her hands in water and she used to scratch them until they were red and inflamed and cracked and used to bleed. She was unable to sleep by reason of the pain and burning. We tried several remedies without receiving any relief. After she began washing with Cuticura Soap and applying Cuticura Ointment she got relief at once and after ten days' treatment was entirely cured."

"My baby when teething, broke out with pimples on her face. After three days' treatment of Cuticura Soap she was cured." (Signed) Mad. D. Oubure, Feb. 12, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send post card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. 50D, Boston, U. S. A.

lowed, but Downing did not look quite so happy when he announced his intention of calling at Haven House on the morrow and asked him to accompany him.

"That reminds me to mention that I dropped in there a few moments this afternoon," said Downing, carelessly, realizing that his friend would be sure to learn of his call sooner or later the first time he saw Bab.

"I missed one of my sleeve links upon re-tying home from last night's affair, and went there to ask if they had found it," he went on, smoothly adding: "I should be delighted to accompany you."

While Neville had been making the request Downing had told himself that it was better for him to go with Neville and watch for himself the impression he made upon Barbara Haven.

He had kept his appointment with India, despite the storm, and they had arrived at a conclusion. India was to give him all the aid in her power as the price of his silence to her past.

He made up his mind that during Neville's call India should monopolize his friend entirely, while Bab would be left to himself.

The next day dawned bright and clear. It was a typical spring morning.

"What do you say for a canter over the hills?" asked Downing.

"I should enjoy it by all means," said Neville.

Thus it happened that the horses were ordered, and in a short time the young men were in the saddle.

They had not proceeded far ere they were surprised to find themselves face to face with India and her cousin, who were galloping toward them.

"What a delightful horsewoman Miss India Haven is!" exclaimed Rupert Downing, attempting to draw his companion's attention away from Bab, but Clarence Neville had neither eyes nor ears for anything save the slim little figure in the blue riding habit, with the white plumes drooping over her golden hair, who followed in the rear.

Both young men raised their hats and slackened their speed, waiting for the two girls to ride up to them.

India said "good morning" gracefully, but shy little Bab turned as red as a rose when she found herself face to face with Clarence Neville, of whom she had dreamed all the long night through.

"At a significant glance from Downing, India took possession of Neville, who was too courteous to show his disappointment at not being able to have a word with Miss Barbara, while Rupert Downing fell back until he was side by side with the little heiress.

Although Clarence Neville did his best to answer the running fire of India's questions, he could not help but wonder vaguely what his friend and Bab were finding to talk and laugh about so gayly.

India exerted herself to attract him, but she saw that it was useless—his thoughts were elsewhere.

For a few moments India was silent, but he did not even seem to notice that she had ceased speaking.

Suddenly she leaned forward and laid her little hand on his arm.

"Will you answer me a question, Mr. Neville?" she queried; "something I should very much like to know?"

"If it is possible, certainly," he responded.

"I should like to know of what or whom you were thinking just now?" she said, slowly.

"Remember, you are to answer truthfully," she said, holding on one finger, laughingly, but withal so earnestly he could not help but feel amused.

"I cannot help but tell you, since you request it," he said. "I was thinking of your pretty cousin, Miss Barbara."

India Haven could scarcely repress the cry of bitter jealousy that rose to her lips, but her voice, when she made answer, did not show her emotion, she could control it so perfectly.

"You are to tell me the thought," she said.

"I was thinking that she looked even fairer this morning in her riding habit than she did in her party dress."

(To be Continued.)

INFANT PARALYSIS.

Some Exercises That Will Aid Sufferers.

(By a Physician.)

Many diseases leave reminders behind them in the form of a lifetime ailment. Infantile paralysis, the dread children's disease, is one of this treacherous sort.

Sufferers from infantile paralysis are often crippled in some way afterwards. If they are not as seriously disabled as that, they frequently have some muscular irregularity.

Sometimes these troubles must be remedied by expedient surgical aid. Sometimes they can be greatly assisted by regular, timely and suitable exercises.

The latter are within the reach of all. Inasmuch as the disease is no respecter of persons and very often finds its way into the homes of those who cannot easily afford surgical attention, perhaps a few suggestions as to the kind of exercises to take may be useful.

A physician who has made a special study of this matter offers the following:

These are for the lower extremities and the patient must lie on the left side when taking them for the right leg, and vice versa. The leg which is not being exercised should be held up by physician or attendant so that the action may be free.

1. Bring the knee slowly up to the chest. This will be done with the aid of the physician.

2. Do the same movement without other aid than the muscles.

3. Try the same with resistance on the front part of the ankle.

Care should be taken that these movements are not made by a swinging action, but by muscular contraction and effort.

Movements suiting the other muscles can be formulated.

She Was Helpless For Two Years

WHY MRS. BALDWIN RECOMMENDS DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

She Could Find Nothing to Cure Her Rheumatism Till On a Neighbor's Advice She Tried Dodd's Kidney Pills.

St. Walburg, Sask., June 9.—(Special.)—"I can truly recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills for any one suffering from rheumatism." These are the words of Mrs. W. A. Baldwin, a highly respected resident of this place. And Mrs. Baldwin gives her reasons.

"I was nearly helpless with rheumatism for two years," she states. "I got medicine from the doctor, and tried several other remedies but nothing helped me. Then one of my neighbors advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I bought four boxes, and they helped almost from the first. I have used early two dozen boxes and am nearly cured."

That rheumatism is one of the results of diseased kidneys is again shown in Mrs. Baldwin's case. She had headaches, stiffness of the joints and backache, her sleep was broken and unrefreshing, and she was always tired and nervous. Her limbs swelled and she was always thirsty. These are all symptoms of diseased kidneys. When she cured her kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills the symptoms vanished—and so did the rheumatism.

At a recent scientific convention in London a paper was read describing the curious process by which the young of certain species of frogs and toads are developed from the egg. What is known as the Surinam toad was cited as the most remarkable of these animals.

The Surinam toad gets its name from Surinam, in Dutch Guiana, in which region the species is not uncommon. The adult toad is about a foot long, and is one of the ugliest of the toad family.

After the eggs are laid a friendly toad takes them and spreads them on the mother's back. They adhere to the skin by a peculiar sticky substance which surrounds them. Gradually the toad's skin wrinkles up and forms a series of cells and in each cell there is an egg. In a day or two the eggs become covered with a membrane to protect them from the air.

The heat of the mother's body then incubates the eggs, and unlike a setting (or sitting) hen she is put to no inconvenience in the way of sticking to a nest, but may roam about at will. In due course the eggs hatch into tiny tadpoles, but they do not emerge yet. They remain in their comfortable quarters till they have passed into the second or fully developed tad stage, whereupon they break the membranous cover of their cell and come out into the world.

The number of young produced at once in this way may be as many as a hundred. In certain species of South American treefrogs the eggs are hatched together in a pouch in the mother's back, but in this case the little ones are far from while still tadpoles. The Pathfinder.

SOME FUNNY TOAD MOTHERS.

At a recent scientific convention in London a paper was read describing the curious process by which the young of certain species of frogs and toads are developed from the egg. What is known as the Surinam toad was cited as the most remarkable of these animals.

The Surinam toad gets its name from Surinam, in Dutch Guiana, in which region the species is not uncommon. The adult toad is about a foot long, and is one of the ugliest of the toad family.

After the eggs are laid a friendly toad takes them and spreads them on the mother's back. They adhere to the skin by a peculiar sticky substance which surrounds them. Gradually the toad's skin wrinkles up and forms a series of cells and in each cell there is an egg. In a day or two the eggs become covered with a membrane to protect them from the air.

The heat of the mother's body then incubates the eggs, and unlike a setting (or sitting) hen she is put to no inconvenience in the way of sticking to a nest, but may roam about at will. In due course the eggs hatch into tiny tadpoles, but they do not emerge yet. They remain in their comfortable quarters till they have passed into the second or fully developed tad stage, whereupon they break the membranous cover of their cell and come out into the world.

The number of young produced at once in this way may be as many as a hundred. In certain species of South American treefrogs the eggs are hatched together in a pouch in the mother's back, but in this case the little ones are far from while still tadpoles. The Pathfinder.

The heat of the mother's body then incubates the eggs, and unlike a setting (or sitting) hen she is put to no inconvenience in the way of sticking to a nest, but may roam about at will. In due course the eggs hatch into tiny tadpoles, but they do not emerge yet. They remain in their comfortable quarters till they have passed into the second or fully developed tad stage, whereupon they break the membranous cover of their cell and come out into the world.

The number of young produced at once in this way may be as many as a hundred. In certain species of South American treefrogs the eggs are hatched together in a pouch in the mother's back, but in this case the little ones are far from while still tadpoles. The Pathfinder.

The heat of the mother's body then incubates the eggs, and unlike a setting (or sitting) hen she is put to no inconvenience in the way of sticking to a nest, but may roam about at will. In due course the eggs hatch into tiny tadpoles, but they do not emerge yet. They remain in their comfortable quarters till they have passed into the second or fully developed tad stage, whereupon they break the membranous cover of their cell and come out into the world.

The number of young produced at once in this way may be as many as a hundred. In certain species of South American treefrogs the eggs are hatched together in a pouch in the mother's back, but in this case the little ones are far from while still tadpoles. The Pathfinder.

The heat of the mother's body then incubates the eggs, and unlike a setting (or sitting) hen she is put to no inconvenience in the way of sticking to a nest, but may roam about at will. In due course the eggs hatch into tiny tadpoles, but they do not emerge yet. They remain in their comfortable quarters till they have passed into the second or fully developed tad stage, whereupon they break the membranous cover of their cell and come out into the world.

The number of young produced at once in this way may be as many as a hundred. In certain species of South American treefrogs the eggs are hatched together in a pouch in the mother's back, but in this case the little ones are far from while still tadpoles. The Pathfinder.

The heat of the mother's body then incubates the eggs, and unlike a setting (or sitting) hen she is put to no inconvenience in the way of sticking to a nest, but may roam about at will. In due course the eggs hatch into tiny tadpoles, but they do not emerge yet. They remain in their comfortable quarters till they have passed into the second or fully developed tad stage, whereupon they break the membranous cover of their cell and come out into the world.

The number of young produced at once in this way may be as many as a hundred. In certain species of South American treefrogs the eggs are hatched together in a pouch in the mother's back, but in this case the little ones are far from while still tadpoles. The Pathfinder.

The heat of the mother's body then incubates the eggs, and unlike a setting (or sitting) hen she is put to no inconvenience in the way of sticking to a nest, but may roam about at will. In due course the eggs hatch into tiny tadpoles, but they do not emerge yet. They remain in their comfortable quarters till they have passed into the second or fully developed tad stage, whereupon they break the membranous cover of their cell and come out into the world.

The number of young produced at once in this way may be as many as a hundred. In certain species of South American treefrogs the eggs are hatched together in a pouch in the mother's back, but in this case the little ones are far from while still tadpoles. The Pathfinder.

AFTER EFFECT OF FEVERS

Banished Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Following wasting disease such as fever, many people find it difficult to regain their former strength. They become breathless and tired out at the least exertion; their appetite is fickle and they often feel as though death was staring them in the face. The trouble lies with the blood which has not returned to its normal condition, and is lacking in the red corpuscles, without which good health is impossible. It is at a time like this that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills prove their great tonic value. Every dose helps to make new, rich, red blood, which means health and vitality. Mrs. Theodore Foley, Athens, Ont., says: "Following an attack of typhoid fever I was left in a very weak and disheartened condition. The smallest exertion left me worn and tired out, and I was hardly able to get around, and naturally felt despondent. I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they proved of the greatest benefit to me. I am now as well and strong as ever, and can do all my own work, and, as we live on a farm, it goes without saying that there is much to do. I feel, therefore, that I cannot say too much in praise of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

If you are suffering from the after effects of fever, la grippe, or any acute disease, you should begin to get new strength to-day through the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

If you are suffering from the after effects of fever, la grippe, or any acute disease, you should begin to get new strength to-day through the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

If you are suffering from the after effects of fever, la grippe, or any acute disease, you should begin to get new strength to-day through the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

If you are suffering from the after effects of fever, la grippe, or any acute disease, you should begin to get new strength to-day through the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

If you are suffering from the after effects of fever, la grippe, or any acute disease, you should begin to get new strength to-day through the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

If you are suffering from the after effects of fever, la grippe, or any acute disease, you should begin to get new strength to-day through the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

If you are suffering from the after effects of fever, la grippe, or any acute disease, you should begin to get new strength to-day through the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

If you are suffering from the after effects of fever, la grippe, or any acute disease, you should begin to get new strength to-day through the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

If you are suffering from the after effects of fever, la grippe, or any acute disease, you should begin to get new strength to-day through the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

If you are suffering from the after effects of fever, la grippe, or any acute disease, you should begin to get new strength to-day through the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

If you are suffering from the after effects of fever, la grippe, or any acute disease, you should begin to get new strength to-day through the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

If you are suffering from the after effects of fever, la grippe, or any acute disease, you should begin to get new strength to-day through the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

If you are suffering from the after effects of fever, la grippe, or any acute disease, you should begin to get new strength to-day through the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

If you