FAMOUS DRUCE CASE IN ENGLISH COURTS.

Detective William Huckle Worked on It For Some Years and May Go Back.

He Tells an Interesting Story to The Times About the Portland Dukedom.

death of the fifth Duke, as there was no apparent claimant and he was supposed to have died without legitimate issue. If it is proved that Thomas Charles Druce and the Duke of Portland were one and the same man then the plaintiff will be able to oust his cousin from the estates and to claim the title. According to the claims put forth the present George Hollamby Druce is the legitimate direct grandson of the old Duke whose eccentricity has caused this 40 years' tro ble.

By personal investigation Detective Huckle claims that he discovered that the late Duke of Portland and Caldwell would, when at the Abbey, leave in the night for London in a closed coach. This coach was a plain one and would be hoisted upon railway trucks and hauled to London, where horses would pull it to the bazaar and the two would alight. In 1898 Detective Huckle was asked to

It is supposed he was keeping out of sight of the plaintiff and was being paid

not want to send his step-uncle down, but if he succeeds it is a big point in his fayor. The trial is now going on in the Marylebone Police Court, in London

The law courts of England have been the axis on which the dukedom of Portland has been placed by limited syndicates and lawyers, who for the past corty-five years or more have been vainly endeavoring to upset the present Duke's claim, and to hand the title azd all the coffin and put 200 pounds of lead in the axis on which the dukedom of Portland has been placed by limited syndicates and lawyers, who for the past forty-five years or more have been vainly endeavoring to upset the present Duke's claim, and to hand the title and all the property over to an Australian, who not many years ago was too poor to call his clothes his own, but who has been trying to get money to wrest the title from the present holder ever since he was old enough to think for himself. The trial was resumed in London yesterday, and there are those who say that the vast estates and name left by the fourth duke to his son or his legitimate issue will be taken from W. J. Cavendish Bentinck, Duke of Portland, Earl of Walden, and turned over to the other branch of the family, if George Hollamby Druce, the Australian, can prove that he is the missing grandson of Charles T. Druce, organizer and owner of the Baker street bazaar, London, W., and that the mythical Druce was the eccentric fourth Duke of Portland.

In 1898 Detective William Huckle, at present practising in this city, was called in to work on the case, being a resident of London at that time and known as a detective of ability. He worked on it for some years, but in the case is one missing link, are no more missing the many veras ago between her father and bruce, in which the latter disclosed the fact that he was the Duke of Portland.

It is claimed that Miss Robins is living on this money and a lot of money that was left be rin '78 when the bazaar, London, w., and that the mythical Druce was the eccentric fourth Duke of Portland.

In 1898 Detective William Huckle, at present practising in this city, was called in to work on the case, being a resident of London at that time and known as a detective of ability. He worked on it for some years, but in the case is one missing link, a man named Taylor, for some years employed in the Baker street bazaar and an intimate friend of the owner. He is the man Detective Huckle says would clear up the mystery. While in England Mr. Huckle became very well acquainted with the daughter of Taylor, and she told him, he says, that her father knew that Thomas Charles Druce, grandfather of the present ciaimant, was the rightful Duke of Portland, and that he lived a Jekyll and Hyde life for years, ending it a few days after Christmas in the year 1864. disposing of the mythical Thomas Charles Druce and burying him in Highgate Cemetery, and going to live on his estates.

The story is one of the strangest that has ever been placed before the public, and reads like a wild romance, but many willing to swear that it is perfectly are willing to swear that it is perfectly true.

In the early fifties the fifth Duke of Portland started a bazaar, according to the claimant, Druce, on Baker street, London, S. W., known as the Baker street bazaar, and occupied it himself, taking the name of Thomas Charles Druce. He married shortly after under the name of Druce, a girl named Cricknor, and they had two children, both boys. George Druce was the eldest, and he died, leaving one son, the present claimant.

After the death of his first wife the man known, as Druce married again, a girl named Annie May being his second wife and two sons were born to them. One of them died but Herbert Druce is still living and under the will of the late Thomas Charles Druce, proprietor of the Bazaar, he came in for the bazaar and a comfortable sum of money. Another son Walter, son of the first wife, died leaving a widow, Mrs. Annie Maria Druce, who is still living and is the one who first started 'proceedings against the present holder of the title. Previous to '98 she started suit for a revocation of the probate of the will which had been granted to a Mr. Young, one of the executors. An extract from the court records of the place where the application was made is that "witness claims that the death of Charles Thomas Druce was a fake and that the funeral was spurious, and after the alleged death Charles Thomas Druce continued In 1898 Detective Huckle was asked to try his hand at unravelling the mystery, and he started out on a systematic hunt for the missing man, Taylor, believing, as he does yet, that this man is the one who could unravel the whole thing. He found a man who was said to know where Taylor had been for the two previous years, and on a Saturday in February of 1898 he followed him with a friend to Dalston Theatre, in London. He saw him there, and the two of them waited for him to come out. While they were waiting they were set upon by five men, who mauled them about brutally before they could get away or get help. Three weeks after the above occurrence he came across a girl in Kingsmand Road who told him where he could find Taylor. He, with two men and a woman, mas Druce was a fake and that the fun-jeral was spurious, and after the alleged death Charles Thomas Druce continued to live in the identity of another per-son." To prove this she asked for an ex-parte order which was grauted by the Cousistory Court to enable her to dis-inter the coffin of Charles Thomas Druce and see if her story was true or if inter the coffin of Charles Thomas Druce and see if her story was true or if Druce really had lived and lied and was not the Duke of Portlans. The authorities of Highgate Cemetery, where the Druce coffin was and is resting, obtained a writ of prohibition from the King's Bench and set a guard over the mausoleum of Charles Thomas Druce, thus preventing any exhumation to this day. "If the present Duke is the rightful heir and Charles Thomas Druce was not the same man as the fifth Duke of Portland," says Mr. Huckle, "why did he get this writ of prohibition through the Cemetery officials to prevent the opening of the casket when that act would at once put an end to all the lawsuits now going on and pending?"

The late Charles Dickens the fearouse. Detective Huckle has been written to in regard to this celebrated case, and was asked to go to England, where he is wanted as a witness, but is not sure whether or not to go, as his business ties him up pretty tight just now.

The latest move in this tremendously sensational case is a startling charge of perjury brought against Herbert Druce, son of Thomas Charles Druce by his second wife, and the proprietor of the Bazaar at present, by George Hollamby Druce, the claimant to the Dukedom of Portland, which is that he "committed wilful and corrupt perjury when he swore at the proceedings instituted some time

The late Charles Dickens. the famous novelist, was an intimate friend of the original owner of the Baker street Bazara, and it is claimed that he knew Druce to be the Duke of Portland in a dual role. He introduced to Druce a South American tobacco planter and his 14-year-old daughter, named Robins, and a keen intimacy sprang up between Druce and the young girl. She returned to her home with her father, but some four years later again visited England, and getting in touch with Druce, was appointed by him to the position of his private secretary. This was in 1868 and those in the know, and the girl herself, who is still living, say that half her work was at the Bazaar and other half at Walbeck Abbey. Her home was in the small town of Worksop where she passed under the name of Madame Tassaud. About this time a man maned Caldwell, an undertaker, appears on the seene, and finding out that Druce was suffering from a painful disease, which he himself had been cured of by Sir Morrill MacKenzie, he introduced this famous medico and he attended Druce at the Bazaar and the Abbey both, and knew it was the same man. Taylor, the Brixton man, who was emplcyed in the hazaar from his boyhood disappeared about the time of the read death of the Duke in 78, and was never found since, but is thought to be still living, and if he is it is said he can clear up the whole mystery. Detective Huckle said that he had an intimate acquaintance with the daughter for some time, and she told him that her father knew Druce to be the Duke of Portland. Taylor's family has not been followed up yet, and they might be able to disclose his whereabouts. His father was at one time the rate collector in Lambeth dis-

Turkeys dropped a cent all round, 14 to 16 cents being asked wholesale, and 16 to 18 cents prevailing on the retail market. Pork was cheaper, and may get cheaper yet. Potatoes took a drop of a few cents, and a welcome drop in apples was also noted. Beef was unchanged, but the Christmas beef is coming in, and the quality is well worth the quoted price. On the grain market there was another very decided drop in the price of oats, which went from 60 down to 55 cents a lushel. Barley has advanced a little. Wheat showed, if any change, a slightly upward tendency, but 97 to 98 cents was about the ruling price. There was a good supply of grains this morning.

a whole, collections are fair. Retailers report that an excellent fall business has been done owing to the good weather, and there has been a fair run of sorting orders. The demand for supplies for lumbering camps is heavy. Canned goods are active at the high prices ruling. All cereals hold very firm. Country produce is still slow in coming forward and supplies are light. Darry products are firm on an active demand.

Toronto reports say: Continued seasonable weather has given an excellent tone to trade in fall lines and retailers report that business is moving well in all parts of the country. The wholesale movement is also quite good. Shipments are large, and they will continue so until the close of navigation. In the dry goods trade there has been an excellent business in fall lines and retailers report their shelves having been pretty well cleared. Winter goods are also beginning to move well. The demand for furs has been active, notwithstanding the high prices.

COBALT NOTES

Elk Lake, P. O., but the name will likely be changed to Jamestown, for being in al-most the richest section of James.

The City of Cobalt Mining Company has been added to the list of shippers from Cobalt camp. To-day they shipped two cars of ore to Perth Anthoy, N. J., one car of which was high grade and the other second grade.

Managing Director Rochester and Manage Fraelick have been making special effort in development work on Cobalt Lake. Conelderable ore has been taken out in shefsinking and drifting, and this company may soon be among the shippers of the camp.

One of the mines which with further development, will, like the famous Temiscag-migue, inspire public confidence in the richmens of the ore denosits of the south-eastern part of Coleman Township, is the Beaver, which lies along side of the Temiscaminque.

From now until Spring surface work of all the properties about Cobalt will be aban doned, and underground development will be the special feature in connection with mining operations in the camp.

Another fairly good strike of silver was made this week on the Silver Leaf-property, along the shore of Kerr Lake. The vein is 2 inches in width and runs into the lake, making it also a good strike for the Crown Reserve Mining Company. It contains calcile and native silver.

The Copper Cliff Smelter Company will give a definite answer as to the amount of ore that it will take by next Tuesday. Most of the shipments from Cobalt are now going to Denver, but the freight rates to that centre are almost on a parity with these to New York.

The Poster Mine is now taking out from 800 to 1,200 pounds of high grade, and 1,500 to 2,000 pounds of low grade, ore a day. A ready market is being found for the former.

According to Mr. H. B. Wills, the concentrator on the Nibissing property will solve the problem of the low strate ore, which is now practically unsateshe. For instance, 100 or 200-ounce ore will be concentrated into 2 2000-ounce ore, and thus will reduce the freights revealty and smelting charges from about 5200 to 52% aton.
