In addition to the captured already reported, four German field guns were taken by us east of Messines in the course of our recent advance in this area on Thursday night. Valuable work was performed by our aeroplanes yesterday, in spite of unsettled weather. Bombs dropped on an enemy dump caused an explosion. Six German machines were brought down in air fighting, and three of our machines failed to return.

BEGINNING.

The war, in the opinion of, Lord orthcilffe, British Commissioner to the United States, is just beginning. In a communication from him read to a meeting to further the Red Cross Fund, Northcliffe said he based his opinion on the result of much experience at the front.

HOSPITAL PRESSURE RELIEVED.

LONDON, June 20. A despatch to the Daily Mail from the British headquarters in France, says the supply of doctors, anesthetics and nurses has been immensely increased during the last week by the rapidity of the American organization, which already has taken over the complete work in a number of our hospitals free for work near the front. I know of no finer example of American promptitude and thoroughness, the correspondent adds.
