

Jeannie Sinclair, OR, THE LILY OF THE STRATH.

CHAPTER XXXV.—JIM MURDOCHSON'S WINNING CARD—AN UNEXPECTED REUNION—HOME AT LAST—CRUSHING TIDINGS.

'Was he, indeed? And no doubt he looked pleased and satisfied?'

'Indeed, returned Douglas. 'What is to be done in the Strath to-morrow?'

'Marriage!' echoed Robert, turning pale and ghastly. 'Whom marriage? Not—oh, heaven, I have not power to utter the name, but you know the lady I mean.'

'Oh, I take ye, Master Robert; I take ye. Dinna pi' yerse!' about, sir. Miss Helen is keeping her troth.'

'Oh, heaven, what a relief!' gasped Douglas, with a long breath, while the blood rushed back into his face. William, who had drawn to him under the fear that he was to hear evil news, warmly grasped his hand in congratulation, when the assurance was given by the landlord that Helen was faithful and constant.

'I was sure it could not be otherwise,' he murmured. 'We have not overcome so many misfortunes only to be disappointed at last. Depend upon it, the good guiding of a merciful Providence which we have experienced has not been manifest only to lead us in the end to blighted hopes and ruined prospects.'

'I was wrong to fear so hastily,' answered Robert. 'But when he talked of marriage my heart grew heavy as lead with a fearful foreboding. Then who are the happy couple?' he added, addressing Jobson, 'whose bliss to-morrow is to see consummated.'

'Who said it but Sir Fergus Sinclair of Baigley?'

'Who did you say?' shouted William in a tone of horror.

'Keep us a' sir, what a gift ye gied me,' said the astonished landlord, as he freed his arm from Denman's frantic grasp.

'What wretched joke is this? Fie, fie, you should not indulge in jests so questionable.'

'I hinna the slightest idea o' what ye mean, sir,' rejoined Jobson. 'There's nae joking about it. It's as true as I'm stannin' here that the Baronet o' Baigley is to be married to-morrow, and his wondrous young bride is Jeannie Sinclair, the Lily o' the Strath. Lord help us, what's the matter wi' the gentleman?'

'Jobson, I am ashamed of you,' said Robert, with great indignation. 'Your conduct is too cruel and horrible to be characterised.'

'Pity me, what do you mean?' cried the landlord, in the extremity of wonderment.

'How can you speak of the marriage of a man who is in his grave?' demanded the youth angrily.

'In his grave! Sir Fergus in his grave! Master Robert, it's you that's havin' noo!'

'Merciful powers!' we heard in California that he had been murdered by his cousin, Lynedoch.'

'And is it possible that ye hinna heard the end o' that story,' said Jobson holding up his hands in amazement.

'Was it not true?'

'True, and yet no true.'

'And forthwith the landlord held them spell bound by a relation of the extraordinary events concerning the execution of Lynedoch, the reappearance of Sir Fergus at the scaffold, and the story he had to tell of his rescue by the gipsies.'

'Poor William Denman! What a blow was in the tale for him. But he uttered no word, he only dashed his open hand against his bloodless brow, and uttered one long, hollow groan.'

'My friend, my friend!' sobbed Robert, bending over him, and yearning, but vainly, to comfort him.

'Hush,' said William. 'Not yet, I can hear nothing yet. Come, let us to Munro's.'

'But—'

'Nay, no buts. 'Tis what I need. Come, I say, come.'

'And with a strange calmness, William led the way from the room, and in a body they crossed the street, and sought admission at the banker's door.'

TO BE CONTINUED.

THERE IS NO PLACE in the DOMINION WHERE DRY GOODS

can be purchased on such favorable terms as in Guelph at WILLIAM STEWART'S. This fact is now universally admitted. Many families buy or order from Guelph, as they find Dry Goods of a superior class, and remarkable for cheapness.—When such is the case, it is astonishing that any who can pay ready cash continue to buy from the surrounding villages an inferior class of goods at high prices, whereas by coming to Guelph they might have the best goods at the lowest price, therefore
