Europe's Enormous Armies. London, July 16 .- The representative Russian newspapers profess to find in the adoption of the Army Bill provocation for adoption of the Army Bill provocation for the immediate increase of the French and Russian armies. Latest official statistics on France, however, show that such increase of the French army would be impossible. The number of recruits is already at the maximum, and the annual deficit of men in the recruiting service remains beyond hope of remedy. German authorities are convinced that Russia also is at the limit of her full effective strength. Under these circumstances, then, Russian threats are regarded as idle. The negotiations for a reciprocity treaty with Russia have not been resumed.
