Sweet as a Rose.

"Of course, it is only natural. Keep things as quiet as you may, in a place like this the truth will leak out, and everybody who is anybody in Trouville knows that you have secured the great catch, the heir to Powis and the Palmer millions. My dear, you seem half insensible to your own notoriety. Why, the eyes of the world, represented by Trouville-sur-mer, will be upon you, and are expectantly waiting for you. Don't laugh! for a million smiles has flitted over the pale face, 'Take the honors the gods have given you, and be happy. Here is your dress, I should make an admirable lady, judging by the care and forethought I expend on your behalf! You left it to me—and here it is,' and she lifts a beautiful costume de bal from the large imperial."

Paula looks at the dress, a cloud of black lace with flakes of silver shimmering here and there, and the dome of dove-grey, looks at it with the faint interest of one who is regarding a dress that is to be worn by any one but herself, and says, calmly:

"It is very pretty."

"Pretty?" echoes Alice. "Pretty! my dear, it is the loveliest thing I ever saw. It is a work of genius. I wrote and told him that I wanted to represent 'Moonlight,'—and here it is, the very thing. Talk about painters, now I call Worth an artist, really an artist. Come and try it on."

Paula goes slowly to the box and Alice slips the dress over her head.

"My dear," she says, enthusiastically, "it does me credit! It does indeed. I used to laugh at your hair in the old days—of course you have forgiven me—that was before this crazy for red hair, you know, but your hair looks simply lovely against that silver, and the dove-grey of the domino. Draw it round you, like the prevailing mania, and has consented to wear the costume of a Doge of Venice, though what sort of personage a Doge may have been, that respectable gentleman is totally ignorant, Alice has chosen May's dress, as she has chosen Paula's and her own, and all are looking forward to the evening event excepting Paula, to whom all evenings are uneventful now—how that she has lost her first and false love and has sold herself."

Of the party, Stacey de Palmer is perhaps the most radiant and self-satisfied. As usual, he is pampered, his life he has "got his way"; he had set his small heart upon getting Paula—perhaps because she was difficult to get—and he has won her. He goes about all day in a state of ecstatic satisfaction and conceit, because he has suddenly dawned upon Nouville that the younger Miss Estcourt is the beauty of the place, and she belongs to him! It goes for nothing with him—the cold, icy way, in which she has superior to him, and he is happy. He "bought her" as certainly and palpably as ever he bought a horse or a dog. Another man might feel hurt by her cold indifference, but Stacey does not. He is quite satisfied, and takes all the congratulations that are showered upon him with a self-complacent smile of superiority and assurance, and is happy. Mr. Palmer and May are satisfied also, for is not Stacey ever so much staidier already? Does he not limit the champagne and the whiskey, and avoid that dreadful gambling-table?

"Stacey's all right," says Mr. Palmer, with a chuckle. "Once married, he'll settle down and go steady."

And if May remarks Paula's set face and cold absent smile, she consoles herself with the reflection that Paula was always a strange girl, and that when she and Stacey are married they will be like the good people in the fairy tales, who are married and are happy.

And so the comedy—ah! and the tragedy of life go on. Hearts break, and one's friends are blind, and to their cry of "All's well" the human soul sinks in the deep waters, perchance never to rise again!

"It matters very much," says Paula, "but you will be sure to look nicer and prettier than any one else in the room."

"Ear one," says Alice, cheerfully. "My dear, I know you will eclipse me, and I am quite resigned. Indeed, I have known it for months past. We have changed places; it is you who are the 'beautiful Miss Estcourt,' now, and I am quite content to shine by your reflection."

Paula laughs incredulously.

"This will be a big affair," says Alice, folding up the dress and handing it to the maid. "They say it will be the biggest thing they ever had at Nouville."

"Where is it to be?" asks Paula, absently.

Alice stares at her.

"Why, do you mean to say that you don't know—that you didn't hear them?"

SEVENTH ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION REORGANIZES FOR THE SEASON

Elects Capt. Frank Reid as President and Decides on Plans for Season.

An enthusiastic and well-attended meeting of the members of the Seventh Regiment was held in the drill shed last night for the purpose of reorganizing the regimental athletic association, for the winter. The following officers were elected:

President—Capt. Frank Reid.

Vice-President—Lieut. George Macbeth.

Secretary—Lieut. Frank Weir.

Treasurer—Color-Sergeant Gibson.

The feeling of the meeting was that indoor baseball was going to be gone for more extensively than ever by the regiment this season, far more so than by any other of the winter sports. It was decided that a committee consisting of Capt. Reid, Lieut. Weir, and Lieut. Macbeth, should be appointed to look after the arrangements for these teams, which will be known as the first and the second regimental teams, respectively. One will be entered in the city league, if such, as is hoped, will be formed, and the other will play against teams from other regiments and towns.

The meeting was also in favor of entering a team in the City Whist League, and Color-Sergeant Gibson and Lieut. Macbeth were appointed to look after this part of the programme.

There will be no regimental hockey this winter. There is some regret felt on this score by some of the boys, for the regiment, containing some fine players, could easily form a team which would be second to none in the city. But the fact is that all the best players in the corps are already pledged to the various other athletic associations. So the Seventh will play hockey, but not as the Seventh.

The meeting was most enthusiastic, and points to a most successful season in athletics, just as a most successful winter regards is looked for this year's corps.

Galaxy of Stars at a Horse Sale

Major Delmar and Sidney Dillon Last of the Wonders Are Dropping Out of Sight, Says New York Sun.

New York, Nov. 14.—More than a thousand trotters and pacers, of which 218 have records of standard speed, will be offered at the Fasig-Keightley Old Glory sale, beginning Nov. 21, at the Madison Square Garden, No. 21, in the exclusive 2:10 list, are catalogued.

Included in the Old Glory are numerous champions, headed by Major Delmar, 1:58 1/4, and 2:01 1/4 with pace-maker in front, the king of trotters, and Prince Alert (1:59 1/4), champion pacing gelding. The names stand out of Arion (2:07 1/4), who still holds the champion 2-year-old record of 2:10 3/4; Jupe (2:07 1/4), champion 2-year-old race trotter; Locanda (2:08 3/4), champion pacing stallion of 1904; Directly (2:08 3/4), champion 2-year-old pacer; Grace Boyd (2:09 3/4), champion 3-year-old of this year, and Monte Carlo (2:07 1/4), champion matinee horse of the Empire City track.

Perhaps the star of the sale has not yet been mentioned. This is Sidney Dillon, the sire of the fastest trotter that ever lived, the peerless Lou Dillon (1:58 1/4). He is only 12 years old, but has three trotters in the list, from dams by different sires, whose records average 2:04 1/4.

Only five different stallions have got one trotter with a record as fast as his average for three.

Among the consignments are several extensive ones from prominent farms. That of the late Charles H. Kerner, at Great Barrington, Mass., will be sold out root and branch, and is headed by Leonatus (2:17 1/4), son of Alcantara. His get are a very choice lot, and have distinguished themselves at Empire City matinees. From the home of Mr. Kinney, generally considered to be the greatest living sire of trotters, come a lot of finely-bred mares in foal to the great sire of Alcantara, and a few of young get, McKinley is the horse Mr. William Simpson recently bought for $50,000. James Butler offers a splendid lot from his View Farm, and largely the get of Direct, Directum and Directum Kelly. Speed is bred in the bone in these youngsters. Senator J. W. Bailey will sell nearly all of his stock, the majority being by prodigal Shultsford Farm, Port Chester, N. Y., home of the sensational sire Axworth (3), (2:15 1/4) is also represented by a large consignment, the choicest lot the veteran breeder, John H. Shults, ever sent to an auction.

FOOTBALL PLAYER SHOT.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 14.—While resisting an attempt to duck him in Lake Mendota because he criticized the playing of the Wisconsin football team, Walter R. Mason, a freshman at the University of Wisconsin, was shot by Grunert, of Chicago, a sophomore, in the foot Saturday night. Mason says he intended simply to frighten his assailant. Grunert's wound is not serious.

EN ROUTE TO ST. LOUIS.

The Galt champion football team was in the city for a short time last night, being en route to St. Louis, where it is to tackle some of the picked American teams. Mayor Monday and a number of other residents of Galt were with the team when they played the games taking place at the Stadium, and, being a portion of the Olympic series, the Galt team will truly be said to represent the Pan-American, if not the all-world, championship. On the Saturday following the Galt team goes to Chicago, where they play the pick of the City League teams. The Canadian representatives travel in a special car over the Grand Trunk. The car is profusely decorated with flags and streamers, and is certain to attract attention wherever it goes.

Yale Has Downed the Tigers of Princeton 15 Times in 22 Years

Of all the football contests across the line, none attracts more interest, possibly, than the battle between Yale and Princeton. These colleges have been meeting annually since 1883, and it is safe to say that no other games have drawn larger audiences. A review of the games during the 22 years shows that Yale has won 15 times and Princeton 7, and that the average

Macbeth, was detailed to look after the arrangements for these teams, which will be known as the first and the second regimental teams, respectively. MELLOY DID NOT LAST LONG WITH BUDDY RYAN

Chicago, Nov. 14.—Billy Melloy, of Boston, white welter-weight champion of America, lost his title tonight to "Buddy" Ryan, of Chicago. The men met at the Harmon A. C. for a bout of ten rounds, but Melloy was knocked out after two minutes of fighting. When they came together in the first round Ryan landed a blow on Melloy's jaw and Melloy took the count of nine before he rose. The blow took all the fight out of Melloy, and in a few seconds he was down again. After being carried to his corner he was unconscious for several minutes.

BOB FITZSIMMONS' LATEST.

Boston, Nov. 14.—Bob Fitzsimmons is planning to build a big factory in Boston next spring for the manufacture of a new breakfast food, and is already negotiating for the purchase of fifty-acre wheat farm in the Texas Panhandle from which the wheat will be shipped to Boston. About next summer he hopes to have the factory running full blast, with all the usual advertising required to successfully place a new cereal upon the market.

He figures that there will be a "pot of money" in a new breakfast food, with the name of Bob Fitzsimmons branded upon the packages, and is thoroughly in earnest about it.

COLLINS EXPLAINS DOUGHERTY DEAL

Jimmy Collins at a recent dinner tendered to him in Buffalo gave the inside facts of the Pat Dougherty deal. Collins said:

"You gentlemen have asked me for the true inside facts about that baseball deal in which Dougherty was sold to the New York Americans, and in reply I will say this much: Dougherty is one of the best hitting ball-players I ever knew in my life. He was instrumental for two years in landing us in second place two years ago and in first place last season. Dougherty is a friend of mine and I

DALY WON HIS FIGHT, THEN KISSED OPPONENT

Baltimore, Nov. 14.—Tommy Daly, of Brooklyn, defeated Kid Sullivan, of Washington, in a fifteen-round bout in this city. Sullivan started out as the aggressor, but after a few seconds the fight evened down, and after the fifth round Daly's superior ring generalship began to tell. Both men fought for the head, and Daly's blocking was the most clever. He landed with his right repeatedly on Sullivan's jaw and head, and in the third round started the blood flowing from Sullivan's ear. He followed this a couple of rounds later with one on the nose.

In the twelfth round Daly landed a terrific right swing on Sullivan's jaw that dropped him for the full count. Sullivan came back and saved himself from a knock-out by clinching. From that time to the finish the fight was a struggle between the two men, who were both fighting for the victory that they carried him on their shoulders, as the last time the men met, and landed several on the jaw that staggered the Washington boy.

Daly's victory was a great one for him, as he had won his way to Sullivan's corner and kissed him.
