WANT AD TIPS

"Never-Done-Before" Want Ads,

"I had never seen such a Want Ad before," related the advertiser, "but it seemed to me it was a good thing to say, and I said it." Results bore him out. This man had a house lot which he was reducing to street level. Most of the unneeded "land"-it was an excellent grade of gravel-he had sold to the city for street purposes. A little was left, for which, at the time, there seemed no demand.

What the advertiser put in his Want Ad was this: 'Poultrykeepers, make that wet poultry yard well-drained and dry, and get more eggs. Gravel it. Excellent gravel for the hauling at 66 Summer St." Poultrykeepers came and hauled away the gravel, and the advertiser's lot was level with the street, ready for building operations. The assertion that there is nothing new under the sun does not hold for Want Ads. Every day, almost, some advertiser pushes ahead without precedent, and cashes in. Who was the first Want advertiser to be besieged with applicants because she put in her Want Ad on a "room to let" the two words, "radio equipped"? Historically speaking, the fact is not settled. This point is certain, though—whoever the advertiser, she sensed what an appealing consideration radio equipment would be. So she used a "never done before" Want Ad, and got splendid

Stored away in the attic where they had been for years, a family had a kitchen stove of a long obsolete model, and various odd pieces of old furniture. A spirit of enterprise seized the housewife. While this old stuff would not interest town people, it would be splendid for a river-bank or mountain camp. So she said in a Want Ad, just at the season people were fitting out camps: "Sound and substantial, excellent for summer camps." And quickly sold the things. What a relief to have them out of the way!-and how good the cash obtained

Although she had never known it to be done before, this housewife went ahead and got Want Ad results. Her example is a good one. Use "never done before" Want Ads without hesitation. There's great profit in them.
