Rectory Negotiations.

Early last summer President Cleveland agreed with the British government that...

It will thus be seen that the World is not alone in drawing a logical inference...

The transfer of this paper to Saturday and part of yesterday in various places in Oxford county, Woodstock and Ingersoll...

These considerations may enable us to better appreciate a rumor now current in Ottawa and Montreal, which is to the following effect: The meeting of the 'Joint High Commission' will take place very soon, and the opening of our Canadian parliamentary session will be held on as a give time, ere parliament rises, to pass on the treaty agreed upon, whatever that is to be. Let it be noted that this year congress takes its long session, and that it is expected to sit until July, perhaps even later. With reasonable diligence on the part of the commission, the conclusion of its labors will find congress still in session; and it is deemed desirable that the dominion parliament should be in session then, too. It is Sir John's program, therefore, to get the commission to the Washington negotiations first, and then to meet parliament with the new arrangement ready to lay before it. Such is the rumor brought by certain wise men from the east. The fact may be recalled here that when both powers were engaged on the treaty of Washington, fourteen or fifteen years ago, the main points of the arrangement had actually been settled by conference and correspondence ere the 'High Joint' of that time had officially met and all things done substantially the same thing is going on now. That his journal may travel about as something still in the distance, and while the Globe is leading public opinion astray by constantly reiterating that Sir John is opposed to reciprocity, and will defeat it if he can, being carried on, and that with no slack hand either. As the Yankee once said: 'Things is working.' 'True enough; things is working,' no doubt; but not so Canada's advantage, it is to be feared. We may expect simply to see the same old trick played over again, and that Canadian interests will once more be sacrificed in order that John Bull and Uncle Sam may be able without loss of dignity to embrace in friendship before all the world. The reciprocity has its warrant in history, we must admit; but we have to add that it rests on the facts of a time which has been, rather than on those of the time which now is. Canadian territory, and Canadian interests in various forms have in times past been recklessly sacrificed by British statesmen; now by peace with the United States at any price, and again through sheer blindness to the value of what they were throwing away. But some things have happened since then, and Canada has become a nation, and has declared herself a 'new nationality.' Becoming bolder still, she has declared her commercial independence, and has presumed to adopt a national policy, much to the disgust of interested parties in both England and the United States, to whom Canada manufacturing for herself was the last thing they wanted to see. When English manufacturers remonstrated with Sir John on the occasion of his first visit to England after this colonial atrocity had been committed, he actually had the cheek to tell them that Canada was going to frame her own tariffs to suit her own requirements, and not those of any other country under heaven. Later still he appointed a Canadian high commissioner to London, in the capacity of ambassador, almost as if Canada were an independent power. No wonder the Montreal Witness—not a friendly witness in this case—felt constrained to say that Sir John, by declaring for national policy and sending a Canadian minister to London, had really done more for Canada's independence than all those that had before talked of it. But what can be done for it, let us ask, by men or by parties who believe that it is our duty to subordinate our commercial policy to that of England, and to give free trade to all comers, whether we get it in return or not? On this more anon.

As seen from without.

It is noteworthy that the newspapers of other cities and towns consider Mr. Howland's candidature a natural and legitimate outcome of the prohibitory policy. We have already quoted some of those journals, and such quotations might be multiplied, but for the present two of them will suffice, one from the press favorable to the Scott act, and the other from the opposite camp. The London Advertiser, which has always stood by the act, says that 'the proposal to form a prohibition party for the purpose of electing prohibitionists to all places of trust has been adopted in Toronto, and that 'the result of the contest will serve to show, to some extent at least, how far it is practicable to make prohibition a test in general elections.'

The St. Catharines Journal is, upon the other hand, a consistent opponent of the Scott act, and did much to bring about the crushing defeat which it sustained in St. Catharines. It is surprised to find that Mr. Howland pursues one policy in that city and pursues another in this city. The Journal says:

When speaking in this city Mr. Howland extolled the Scott act as the greatest for all evils, social, political and municipal, and the sudden wheel about must be a great surprise to those who listened to his stirring address on behalf of the anti-Scott act. He extolled and consistent temperance people can have no other feeling than disgust at the ready manner in which one of their ablest and most respected citizens has turned round on the prospect of personal success.

We are all well acquainted with the fact that Mr. Howland is a man of high character and given to backsliding. We are all well acquainted with the fact that Mr. Howland is a man of high character and given to backsliding.

quintuple fine, if necessary, imposed upon all the violators of such law. Some would perhaps say that the existing law is not too severe, but it would be justified in enforcing the law by making all law-breakers pay such fine as they would not be able to pay. It is not by a high license or prohibition, but it would be justified in enforcing the law by making all law-breakers pay such fine as they would not be able to pay.

The City Lighting Contract. Editor World: In making a new contract with the Electric Light Company it is proposed to surrender the power of giving monthly orders to terminate. That leaves the company free to continue the present unsightly poles and dangerous exposed wires for the purpose of making the lines the wires will have been put underground in all the leading cities of Europe and the United States.

The World ought also to know why members of the fire and gas committees were so heavy on the objection line with regard to the Gas and Electric Light Company's contract, although it was for a lesser number of lights; while they were mum as to the Electric Light Company's contract, which was the same figure as before, and for the same number of lights.

What is the Pattern? Mr. W. F. Hubbard, liver and public keeper, 292 Queen street west, says: 'Hallam's' Recipe for curing colds, coughs, and croup, is the most satisfactory and speedy remedy.
