In regard to the outlook for the future, I need scarcely remind you that our business, being subject largely to elements beyond human control, is of such a nature that we do not feel safe in attempting to form an estimate in advance of the probable result of any year's transactions. We can only continue to pursue that course which experience and prudence point out as best in the interests of the Company and rely upon the outcome being in the future, as it has proved in the past, such as to yield shareholders a good return upon the capital invested while affording policy holders ample security.

I cannot close without a further reference than that made in the report to the loss we have sustained since we last had the pleasure of uneeting the shareholders in the death of our late vice-president.
