

has just made its appearance. It is a cleanly printed, well got up, eight page illustrated paper, and is a marvel of cheapness at sixty cents a year; in clubs of five or over, only fifty cents."

The Guelph Herald says:—"The Methodist Book and Publishing House makes another stride forward in its popular periodicals. A new paper for the young people, with the progressive name 'Onward,' an eight-page, well-illustrated weekly, is issued at the low price of sixty cents a year."

The best endorsement, however, is that of large orders. Grace Church, Winnipeg, sends the first order for 160 copies of 'Onward,' in addition to a full supply of Pleasant Hours and the other papers.

Richmond Hill follows with an order for 100 copies of 'Onward.' If schools of similar size offer in like proportion 'Onward' will be still more successful than any of our other Sunday-school periodicals.

A few schools have objected to the change; but so did also a number of schools when the successive changes were made which have made our Sunday-school periodicals so successful.

We again invite, dear brethren, your earnest and cordial co-operation in endeavoring to furnish for our young people everywhere the mental and moral aliment whereby they may grow up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Give "Onward," and the new series of Pleasant Hours a three-months' trial, and we are confident you will be pleased with the result.

The SUNDAY-SCHOOL BANNER will not only be much enlarged in size, but will be printed in clear, bold, leaded type, a great improvement on the previous method.

I remain, dear brethren,

Yours very faithfully and fraternally,

W. H. WITHROW,
Editor.

Webster's Unabridged Dictionary. Quarto, pp. 2118. G. & C. Merriam, Springfield, Mass. Toronto: William Briggs, and Methodist Book Rooms in Montreal and Halifax. Price, $12.50; indexed, $13.50.

We have used Webster's Unabridged for 25 years and have always found it an exceedingly reliable and satisfactory dictionary. Successive revisions have kept it abreast of the advances in philological science, but this new book is in advance, we think, of every other. It is not a mere revision; it is a new book from cover to cover; printed from new plates, cast from new type, the whole reset, enlarged and improved, bringing it in every department up to date. It has not been a hurried revision; it has been in progress for over ten years and has engaged the services of more than 100 paid editorial co-laborers. Before the first copy was printed there was expended upon this new book a sum exceeding $300,000.

The page is considerably larger than in the old Unabridged and is very clearly printed. The black-faced type make the catch words, moreover, very distinct. A feature of great importance is the enumeration of synonyms with their careful discrimination in connection with all important words. The derivation of words and their pronunciation are carefully indicated, and their proper use is illustrated by citations from a very wide range of authors.

Pictorial illustration is more largely used than ever by means of small, clear engravings in the text and by classified list at the end of the volume, covering 82 pages. In the numerous departments of science the definitions and illustrations are especially helpful, so that the book really becomes almost a cyclopedia. The different combinations of the word "photo-" for instance, as photograph, etc., fill completely two columns, with 75 titles. The combinations of "phon-" such as phonograph, cover 40 titles, and those of "phos-" as in phosphorus, 32 titles. These are but specimens of the very careful treatment of the recent applications of science. Eight colored plates are prefixed giving the official flags, seals, arms, etc., of the nations of the world; also a very full and succinct history of the English language by Prof. James Hadley, LL.D., of Yale College; also guides to pronunciation, orthography, etc.

A series of valuable appendices are added, giving names of noted persons and places in fiction and familiar pseudonyms, covering 31 pages; a pronouncing gazetteer, a geographical dictionary of the world, containing over 21,000 titles, filling 95 pages; a vocabulary of Greek and Latin proper names covering 19 pages; quotations from classical and modern authors 12 pages, and a biographical dictionary containing 10,000 names. So complete is this latter that even the name of so humble an individual as the present writer is included.

The whole book is a magnificent specimen of book-making and book-binding—strong, firm and flexible, with a patent leather index in the margin. The price of this book in best style is $12.50, with leather index, $13.50.

The definitions in important departments: as architecture, botany, chemistry, geology, law, mechanics, medicine, music, physiology, etc., have been revised by experts in these different departments.

ONE Sunday a boy who had always been noted for his respectful demeanor observed a rummy old citizen yawning on a street-corner, and said to him, "Better not open your mouth too wide." "Why?" was the surprised query. "There's a law against opening a saloon on Sunday."
