THE LAST FORTY YEARS.

Since the Hahnemann centennial in 1855, homœopathy has made rapid strides in New England where it now has more than twelve hundred on its list of practitioners. A medical college has been established which has taken a leading position in medical instruction and has graduated more than six hundred physicians. Every State has its chartered homœopathic society and some twenty local medical societies, clubs and associations are in active work. Three general hospitals of important size have been erected in different states and six have been established in which homœopathic and allopathic treatment are admitted. Several other hospitals and asylums have been placed under the care of homœopathic physicians. The State has established an Insane Hospital at Westboro' capable of providing for six hundred patients. Dispensaries have been established in various States, a single one of which has treated more than a quarter million of patients.

Equally extensive growth has taken place in other parts of our country. A national association with 1553 active members six national homœopathic societies representing various branches of medicine, one hundred and forty three State and local societies, one hundred and twelve hospitals and asylums, fifty nine dispensaries, thirty one homœopathic journals, twenty medical colleges, representing a high grade of instruction, have been established and are in successful operation, while not less than ten thousand homœopathic physicians are practising in America.—Bulletin of Medical.

INDIA AND HOMŒOPATHY.

The Calcutta Homœopathic Medical School is growing in importance and usefulness, and students are flocking to it from all parts of the East. Twenty-one students were graduated at the last session. There is a certain keen logic in the Eastern mind that causes it to reject blundering, unreasoning Allopathy and take up with Homœopathy, which is a beautiful and almost an exact science.—Homœopathic Envoy.

THERE IS BUT ONE WAY.

After thirty-six years of clinical experience, and having a knowledge of all systems of medicine, I am positive that no disease was ever cured by medicine unless it was homœopathic. This being true then patients must remain invalids if nature does not cure, until the prescriber, who is not a homœopath, stumbles upon a remedy that is homœopathic.—Adam Given, M. D. in Homœopathic Guide.
