

with Sir. Oliver Mowat that the Manitoba government was acting in good faith in passing the acts of 1890. The action of the present government showed that it was animated by the same spirit of unfairness. The settlement was based, not on constitutional rights, but on political exigencies.

Even the reference in the speech from the throne implied that the settlement was not a full measure of the rights of the minority; but the minority was told that the local government would restore a fuller measure of rights in a generous carrying out of the terms of the settlement. The minority, he said, was not disposed to place much faith in the generosity of a government which despoiled it of its legal rights, especially in view of the statement of Attorney-General Cameron, made in the debate on the second reading of the bill founded on the settlement in the local legislature the other day, that the settlement represented the last concession Manitoba would be asked to make. It had, he said, been contended that the settlement provided for the teaching of the French language. This was not the case. That contention was a disingenuous one.

The only use made of French was to enable pupils to better understand the English language. The government, in giving publicity to this contention, was simply trying to throw dust in the eyes of the public, and enact by law what was already established by practice for years.

He claimed that the unconstitutional action of the federal government in coming to a settlement with the Manitoba government, without consulting the minority, did not remove from the federal parliament power to enact remedial legislation. Even the refusal of parliament to pass remedial legislation did not revoke its power to do so, for so long as the judgment of the privy council remained unsatisfied the duty rested upon the federal power to apply the remedy. It was true the majority ruled in parliament, but only within the terms of the constitution.

The so-called settlement was practically an amendment to the constitution, an infraction of an imperial act and disloyalty in disguise. In order to consent to giving the so-called settlement a trial, the minority would have to sacrifice its present legal position and admit that the federal parliament had no power to compel the local legislature to restore its rights. This would mean submission to the demands of public opinion in Manitoba with the result that sooner or later every right and every privilege of the small minority would be taken away. In conclusion he maintained that if the present government, while in opposition, had assisted the late administration as the present opposition was ready to assist the government, the whole question would have been settled and removed from the political arena two sessions ago.

Senator Dever spoke for a few minutes and Senator Scott moved the adjournment of the debate.

The Papal Delegate.

A Winnipeg gentleman who has met Mgr. Merry del Val recently and had several conversations with him has given his impressions to the Free Press. He is described as a gentleman speaking English fluently and even elegantly, holding broad and liberal views and most anxious to promote concord among the warring parties.

In explanation of the expressions of regret uttered by Mgr. del Val that the Manitoba legislature had passed the settlement bill before the Pope's views were known, the fact is stated that this expression of regret had reference wholly to its effect upon the parties within his church in Quebec and Manitoba, and was not meant as a criticism upon the action of the Manitoba legislature. He fully recognizes that his mission has no reference whatever to anything that could interfere with legislation by either the federal or local parliaments. The fact that certain legislation had been passed before he arrived added to the difficulty and delicacy of his mission to his own people; that was all. This will be a welcome explanation to many Canadians, who thought from the published interviews that Mgr. del Val misapprehended the situation of affairs in Canada. In this view of his mission men of all creeds can welcome a man of his distinguished standing and ability and wish success to his mission. In this spirit he will doubtless be received when he comes west.—Free Press.

After Many Days.

Holmfeld, Man., Feb. 14, 1890.
W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.

DEAR SIR,
For 12 years my wife was a martyr to that dread disease, dyspepsia. Nothing relieved her; physicians were consulted and medical skill tried, without avail. One doctor advised a change of climate, suggesting Manitoba as a desirable place. We acted upon this advice, coming here two years ago. The change of climate wrought a change indeed, but for the worse, as she was soon confined to bed, and under the care of two doctors, who asserted she could live but a month longer. A neighbor came to see her one day who had been reading your almanac. She told her of the testimonials she read in it, of the great amount of good they were doing, and advised her to try a box of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. She did so, was relieved, kept improving, and is now able to do housework, and continues the use of Morse's Pills.

Yours gratefully,
GEO. DUNN.
