

placed on the "liquidating" /downsizing/ commissions. A number of the managers and experts relieved of their current positions should be assigned to the newly formed associations and enterprises and to those existing ones which are to be built up.

Transferring the enterprises and organizations to the newly-formed administrative organizations should be done in a clear and orderly way and all office records must be preserved. The restructuring process must not result in a reduction in the industry's production indicators.

Lesnaya promyshlennost'

28 May 1988

Pages 1 & 2

(Slightly abridged)

"Krasnoyarsklesprom" Needs Better-Suited Logging Technology

The shift to new management conditions has forced us to reconsider many, apparently, irrefutable truths. This relates to the mechanization of logging work as well. Strange as it may seem, the introduction of multi-unit and multi-functional equipment at the felling site has, up to the now, resulted in a negative economic effect. This is the result of the equipment's high cost, the low reliability factor, problems with spare parts and supplies, etc. These losses were previously covered by the state but now they have to be made up for by the enterprises themselves. Enterprises with a high percentage of manual labour are, not surprisingly, finding themselves in a better position.