The guide is not itself designed as a commentary, and contains no interpretative opinion, although the choice of excerpts and statements necessarily requires editorial discretion. Our purpose, therefore, is to assemble in one collection materials which will give to the interested reader a basic reference source on Canadian policies in the field of peace and security, and, at the same time, to indicate the scope for further enquiry.

In organizing the contents, we have chosen to follow the subject order identified in the mandate of the Institute, viz. arms control and disarmament, defence, and conflict resolution. The reader may wish to note that the last category - conflict resolution - has been defined for the present purposes as Canadian responses to major regional conflict issues.

Each entry is organized under five headings - Background, Current Canadian position, Parliamentary Context, Current References, and Further Reading. These headings have been defined in the following notes.
