

Sir Arthur Currie-2-

responsible head. But when due allowance has been made for these factors, candor compels me to reply in a way calculated to give you an adverse opinion, although, as you have seen, that opinion is not unmixed with appreciation of some of the difficulties and with a high personal regard for Dr. Harrison as a scientist.

I am preparing a criticism of the curriculum of Macdonald College and shall hope to have it ready in the course of a few days.

Yours very truly,

R. D. Kline
