

degree of latitude, where he observed the land to be covered with piles of ice, and to extend itself towards the north. Afterwards, a second letter came from Captain Bernardo, dated from Menbaufet, acquainting me, that on the 29th of August he arrived at Arena, having sailed 20 leagues up the river de los Reys, where he waits my orders; Captain Ronquillo having, pursuant to my directions, salted up a large quantity of fish and venison, and got aboard 100 tons of maize, or India corn, I weighed from Conasset the 2d of September, 1640, bringing away several of the country people, who had desired to enter on board our ships, and on the 5th of the same month I anchored betwixt Porto de la Arena and Menbaufet, in los Reys river; afterwards returning down this river, I found myself in the north-east part of the South-sea, from whence providence brought us safely to the port where we had set out on this discovery, having found that there is no such thing as a north-west passage into the South-sea.

The whole will more clearly appear in the map.

The end of Admiral de Fonte's letter.
