TODAY'S ENTRIES

AT NEW ORLEANS.

WAITING FOR THE SIGNAL

It sometimes happens that a P-A-Y-E car stands at an intersection with doors shut and steps drawn up, waiting for the signal of the traffic policeman to proceed.

A belated passenger who hurries up may be annoyed that the door is not opened in order that he may enter.

A moment's reflection will show that a car cannot stand at a crossing more than a certain length of time, and that if it fails to obey the signal of the traffic officer it may lose several minutes, thus inconveniencing all the passengers.

With the other cars passengers could step aboard whenever the car was stationary. The more complicated mechanism of the P-A-Y-E cars makes this impossible. The greater safety of the P-A-Y-E cars more than makes up for this trifling inconvenience.
