The board will sit for five days, and at this meeting it will be announced when these sessions will be held.

The enumerators' lists are being checked up, and it is found that quite a number of people have been overlooked. In one subdivision there are nine names of eligibles who are not on the list. Appeals will be taken in every one of these cases.

In other divisions men and won have been left off. The Gibbons her quarters has been besieged with quiries, and as soon as the matter.

Enough Political Honors.

A number of changes will be made in the personnel of the county council after reeves having already announced their decisions to withdraw from municipal politics. Others are carefully considering whether they will allow their names to go before the electors. It is expected that at least four will be returned by acclamation.

The four county councillors who have signified their intention to retire from any further municipal contests are John A. McIntyre, reeve of McGillivray, who has recently moved into Huron County; William Robson, reeve of Lobo, retiring on the advice of his physician because of ill-health, and Reeves Alex, McIntosh and Fred Barrett of East and West Williams, respectively.

Mr. Ferguson's conscientious objections

Another large batch of applicants allow him four months in which to clear Another large batch of applicants for exemption came before the tribunals today. The members of each board were in the majority of cases required to remain on duty for practically the whole day in order to deal with the raft of claimants on Monday, and it is expected that today's work will be a duplication of Monday's. Indications are that the exemption work will be completely finished by the date set, December 10. The members of the boards have become accuss tomed to dealing with all varieties of claims, and as a consequence are able to dispose of the applicants much more rapidly than was the case when they first began sitting.

Owing to the fact that conscientious objectors are receiving little consideration from the tribunals the number of conscientious young men has diminished to a noticeable extent. There are yet several applicants, however, who present conscientious scruples as their grounds for immunity to military service.

G. Fergusor, although a Catholic, informed Tribunal 187 that he did not be closely in municipal to the ledieve in war, but could furnish no evidence that he had entertained these beliefs before the war.

Dundas and Richmond streets will protest against being charged a frontage tax on the underground conduits on tax on the underground conduits on these streets.

It will be remembered that in 1911 the utilities commission put them down, the intention being to put all wires underground. The property owners agreed to pay for them, provided that the wires all came down. The work cost about $44,000, and for nearly seven years the conduits have been idle. This year the council decided to make a charge for the work. The property owners will protes.

They claim that the conduits are of no benefit, and will be of no benefit for no benefit, and will be of no benefit for ten years more. It will take that long to get authority compelling all wires to go underground.

In the meantime they claim that the city should carry the cost. When the conduits are an improvement to their property they will pay, and not before.

Magistrate Graydon, in making a definite announcement a few days ago to the effect that he would resign unless the council granted him $3,000 a year, based his assertion upon the fact that the council had intimated that the magistrate's salary would in the future be $2,000 a year.

"It was with reluctance that I accepted this position in the first place, but had I anticipated for a minute there would have been such quibbiling over the salary, I would never have thought of taking this job," said the magistrate.

"However, as it stands I will likely continue, but I will make some dofferent provision towards practicing than has been effective in the past."

The magistrate that the city had collected $7,000 more in fines this year than ever before, indicating, he thought, that he must be doing something.

"Since I was sworn in as magistrate I have never accepted a single legal case, although some persons appear to think I am doing as much as I did formerly. The promise was made while I was deputy magistrate that I was to practice, but since I have done nothing of that kind," sand Magistrate Graydon.

As evidence that he had made a graydon.

As evidence that he had made a financial sacrifice in accepting the job he mentioned one instance alone where he would have received $500 as crown proceedings of the control of the contr prosecutor at a murder trial this fall had his position not prevented his ac-cepting the appointment.
