featherweight. This match, if satisfactory arrangements can be made with both boxes, will be contested in New Haven, Conn.
Greb Bests Jack Dillon.
Pittsburg, July 30-Jack Dillon, of Indianapolis, was given the worst beating of his ring career in a ten-round bout with Harry Greb before a crowd of 15,000 at Forbes Field ball park tonight. Greb took every round except the fourth, which was even. In the seventh round Dillon was almost out even though on his feet, but Greb could not put over the haymaker. The same occurred again in the ninth round but Dillon managed to weather the storm.
Dillon's most telling blow was a right hook to the side of Greb's head in the fourth but Greb quickly recovered and returned five lefts to the face. Greb beat Dillon at his own game, inflicting, and had a wide margin at the finish.
Kelly Bests Pete Hartley.
Westfield, July 30-Harlem Eddy Kelly of Pittsfield, substituting for Paddy Burns, of Far Rockaway, N. Y., gained the popular decision over Pete Hartley in a twelve-round bout at the Whip City A. C. tonight. Kelly had a margin in eight rounds while two were Hartley's and two even.

Wrestlers Rely On a Favorite Grip

Each Champion Depends on Certain Holds to Overcome Opponents
Is wrestling being made a one-hold game, a specialty, by the different succeeding champions of the decade? Joe Rogers, a Buffalo Giant, who met Earl Caddock, in Waterloo, Ia., last week, advanced the idea that he can be hitting anybody, but believes that champion wrestlers would make them even better than they happen to be by developing a greater variety of holds or at least getting away from the one-hold idea.
"This Caddock job is a marvel of speed and skill," Joe, "and I can readily see how he wins his matches with bigger men who haven't the greater natural qualifications that Caddock has."
"But even Caddock, with the wonderful list of holds that he is supposed to be master of, inclines to a favorite lock in throwing a man. This is a scissors on the head, coupled with an armlock or a bar arm. It is a mighty effective hold, but at the same time, if a man is going to throw a man, prospective opponents soon devise a good defense for it."
"In Gotch, the first real champion the catch-as-can game ever had, we had a man of good versatility, yet in throwing a man he invariably used but one hold—a crotch and half nelson. A good many people thought that because Gotch perfected the toe hold and used it a great deal he threw his opponents with it. That's a mistake. He used the toe hold to get a man's legs apart leading up to a crotch lock."
"The decision of the late champion Gotch as champion, used the bone-crushing body scissors and little else in throwing his men. It was good as far as it went, but when he met a man of greater range and knowledge he was beaten. It is my belief that Stecher should be placed in the hands of the most competent man obtainable to perfect and widen him. He needs more actual knowledge of the finer points of the game."

Feared War Would End Too Quickly

Impressions of Canadians of First Contingent Changes in Three Years
Correspondent Recalls Events Connected With Arrival in England of Our First Expeditionary Force
London, July 14.—(Third anniversary.)—In anticipating the third anniversary of the war, it is of some interest to take a glance at the impressions of Canadians on this side in which the Dominion of Canada has figured. As soon as war broke out, Anglo-Canadians held a public meeting and formed a Canadian Contingent Association. The masonic fraternity (mostly members of Canadian Lodges) decided to pool their efforts and money with the association in the establishment of a hospital, which was in the time inaugurated near Folkestone.
In addition to this, the C.W.C.A. has collected a large sum for a comfort fund for the contingents of J. C. Coliner, C.M.G., the hon. secretary, our troops have enjoyed a constant supply of extra clothing, food, dainties, tobacco and game outfits.
In the weeks that followed we watched with interest the stories of ships departing for the front. The week-end found us fairly normal, and the eastern newspapers were reaching London within a week of publication. In October, 1914, there were no stories, and everybody knew that Valcartier had been practically evacuated. Entertaining Canadian correspondents went down to Southampton and became staunch friends with every old war who was likely to be talkative after that was quenched. The Gazette correspondent remained in London, but through the efforts of J. C. Coliner, C.M.G., the hon. secretary, our troops have enjoyed a constant supply of extra clothing, food, dainties, tobacco and game outfits.

THE ONLY FAIR WAY.

Hamilton Times.—Canada can easily spare the men. She could spare many more if she had to. Conscription is the only fair and square way of raising them. Our men at the front now are daily being reduced in number. They are overworked. They long for rest, for reinforcements. We sent them there. They are fighting for us. Can we desert or neglect them? We talk about money. How can we expect men to be buoyant and brave in spirit if they believe that the people at home are hesitating to send them help?
"Who would they think if they were told that the people at home were to vote whether they would send them further help or leave them to their fate? They are fighting for us. Can we desert or neglect them? We talk about money. How can we expect men to be buoyant and brave in spirit if they believe that the people at home are hesitating to send them help?

Contest Over James B. Brady's Will is Ended

Sum Less Than $1,000,000 Will Be Divided Among Three Contestants; Compromise Made as War Measure
Rather than engage in a long legal controversy which probably would last six years, the executors and legatees of the $4,000,000 estate left by James Buchanan Brady of New York, arrived at a settlement last week with the contestants of the will, Daniel M. Brady, a brother of the decedent, Mrs. Harriet Mathieu, a sister, and Mrs. Mary E. McCoy, a half-niece, whereby a substantial sum, but said to be less than $1,000,000, will be divided among them in lieu of their claims.
When the fourth division was in process of formation, a new camp in the Aldershot region was selected; this was Branshott Camp, which is in a healthy spot on the Surrey moorlands.

C.E.F. Advertised
In the summer of 1916 Sir Sam Hughes came over and decided to let England know that Ypres and Festubert had not exhausted the Canadian expeditionary force. Reviews were held at Shorncliffe, where the training troops were and at Bramshott (where the 4th division was) and not only Canadian, but London pressmen were invited to attend. The provost-marshal of course ordered them off from the place where they could see well, but was astounded when an officer informed him the press was there by order.
Following the resignation of the late minister of militia there were great changes in the administration, and for a time there was uncertainty and perplexity. Since then, however, Sir George Perley (as overseas minister of militia) and Lt.-Gen. Sir Richard Turner, G.C.B., Canadian troops overseas, have smoothed things out, and the machinery of the Canadian forces in England is now running easily and with the minimum of discontent, and Sir George Perley has adopted a courteous attitude towards Canadian pressmen whom he keeps informed of all legitimate developments. Moreover, the appointment of Stewart Lyon as the Canadian front as war correspondent for the dominion now ensures a daily record of what is going on among our troops. And in harmony with the situation in England, conditions in France are also eminently satisfactory, and it is a matter of pride that Lt.-Gen. Sir Arthur Currie, corps commander, is a Canadian-born officer, who has been with the C.E.F. through the three years of warfare which find Canada untroubled and undismayed.

the hospitals named in the will were eager to develop their institutions to meet war exigencies.
The settlement, it is expected, will be paid from the residuary estate which constituted the bequest to the society of the New York hospital to found a department of urology to be known as the James Buchanan Brady foundation. The value of the bequest has been estimated at $3,000,000.
In effecting the settlement the executors acknowledge the authenticity of Mrs. McGee's claim to kinship, although when she interposed in the contest begun by Daniel M. Brady and his sister, the former disclaimed Mrs. McGee's relationship. Mrs. McGee, who thus becomes enriched through the executor's action, is the widow of James A. McGee, who was employed in a pumping station for the department of water supply. She lives with her five children at No. 208 Fifth avenue, Brooklyn. Conclusive proof was presented that she is the daughter of Mrs. O'Neill, a half sister of "Diamond Jim" Brady.
The decision of the executors to compromise the claims was characterized as a war measure and for economical reasons. The Johns Hopkins hospital, which received a legacy of $800,000 in the will, was the last to agree to the settlement.
In the will Daniel M. Brady is bequeathed $100, the document stating "my brother is a wealthy man and there is no necessity for me to leave him any substantial sum of money or property of any kind." Mrs. Mathieu, who lives in East Jaffray, N. H., was to receive the income of $25,000, the principal of which would revert to the residuary estate upon her death. Mrs. McGee was not mentioned in the will, the decedent not being aware of her kinship.
Counsel for the executors and contestants refused to reveal the amount of the settlement. Littleton Fox, counsel for Mr. Brady and his sister, was asked if it was true that each of the contestants were awarded $100,000. "This he would not say; but he did remark that it was not within 'gunshot' of a million dollars in the aggregate."
At the offices of Griffen, Hobbs & Beard, attorneys for the executors, Mr. Daniel M. Brady at his office, No. 93 Liberty street, said:—
"I have not discussed this affair since my brother died. I have nothing now to say—not a word."

Not His Idea of Wealth
"Mamma," said small Henry, "I don't believe Solomon was half as rich as they say he was."
"Why not?" queried his mother.
"Because," replied the youthful student, "it says here 'and slept with his fathers.' If he had been very rich I guess he would have had a bed of his own."
