ADAM J. CHARLTON DEAD

Prominent as Decorative Painter and in Amateur Theatricals

Adam J. Charlton died at his home, 46 St. David street, this morning, following periods of illness during some three years. Mr. Charlton was a widely known citizen, respected by a large circle of friends and well liked by all whom he met. He was prominent in days gone by as an artistic designer and fancy painter and on occasions of official visits to the city and other public functions calling for display and decorations, Mr. Charlton carried out much of the work. On the visit of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York the large arches in King street and in King Square were his handwork and came in for much commendation. Pictures of the arches were published in various periodicals.

Mr. Charlton was also active and popular in amateur theatricals and besides playing characters, promoted several local productions with much success. His death will be widely mourned in the city and much sympathy will be extended to his bereaved wife and son, William A., clerk in the local harbor master's office.

The funeral arrangements have been made for Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, standard time.

BOOKS OUT HIS ENGINE, SINKS TO FLOOR IN DEATH

Engineer George H. Brown of C. P. R. Succumbs in Bay Shore Office—Veteran in Service and Popular Man

George H. Brown, veteran engine driver of the C. P. R., died suddenly about seven o'clock this morning in the office at the Bay Shore round house. His last act was in compliance with the duty he had always performed well; he had just signed for looking out his engine for a run to the St. John yard, when he sank dying to the floor. No one was with him at the moment, but Yarnmaster Monahan, who had just left the round house, saw Mr. Brown as he was overcome. Kindly hands soon bore up the stricken man, but there was nothing that could be done for him—his life had ended. Coroner F. L. Kenney was notified and gave permission for removal of the body and it was taken to Messrs. Brennan's and prepared for removal to the saddened home on Lancaster Heights.

Mr. Brown was of English birth, but had been for thirty-six or thirty-seven years in the employ of the C. P. R. He had climbed the rungs of the ladder to the position as competent, reliable engineer. For years he was engineer on the Boston train; then was locomotive foreman at night at Bay Shore and later was on engine duty between the city and Bay Shore. He was a clever man, was secretary of Division 471, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and had represented the local men on the legislative body at Ottawa. He was companionable and of pleasing manner and held the esteem of all. Fellow members of the C. P. R. medical staff were deeply grief-stricken today on learning of his death. Mr. Brown had been in his ordinary health and the shock of his sudden passing away was great to them. Mr. Brown leaves his wife and three sons—Archie, George and the C. P. R. and Harry. The sympathy of a host of friends will go out to them in their bereavement.

Mr. Brown was a member of the Fairville branch of Foresters and prominent in Golden Rule Lodge of Oddfellows. He leaves a brother and sister in England.

Sergeant Strachan Meets Relatives of Pte. J. W. Patterson, Whose Effects he Had in Charge—Stories of the 26th

Sergeant J. M. Strachan, M. M. and Croix de Guerre, of this city, who for some time has been looking for the relatives of his friend, the late Pte. J. W. Patterson, has at last been successful in his quest.

While walking along Union street yesterday he met two ladies and a child who reminded him of a photograph which was among Patterson's possessions. He stopped them and found that they were the mother, wife and child of his late friend. Needless to say he was delighted to find them and so fulfill the last wish of his comrade by returning his personal belongings to the loved ones for whom he gave up his life.

Sergeant Strachan told several interesting stories about the famous 26th carried on. He told how Lieut. H. H. Henderson, M. C. Monck home, who retired home short time ago and is well known in this city, avenged the death of his comrade, Lieut. Jack Dawson. Dawson had been picked off by a sniper and Henderson swore he would get the man who had killed his friend. He rushed the sniper's hideout and the miserable Hun who was in it never fired another shot.

Later Henderson, while leading his platoon in the Amiens show on Aug. 8, was shot through the right lung. He gave his instructions to his senior sergeant and settled himself to make the supreme sacrifice. Strachan left him for dead on the field and what were his surprise and joy a few months later when he saw his old platoon commander walking along the Strand may be imagined. He also told how Captain McDougall, his company commander in the same battle of Amiens, had become separated for a moment from the most of his company and had his revolver shot out of his hand. McDougall, with courage which held spellbound those who saw him, walked right up to the Hun (who was so amazed that he forgot to fire), took the revolver from him, shot him, then shot another who tried to interfere and swept a section of German trench with fire from his revolver and another he picked up until the terrified Hun surrendered. McDougall was later awarded the M. C. and bar.

Sergeant Strachan was very modest about how he won his own decorations, saying they came up with the ration.

WELCOME HOME.

Sergeant F. E. Blizard was another St. John boy who arrived home yesterday on the S. S. Scandinavian. He has been serving with the imperial forces for the last four years. He has a brother, Sergeant K. L. Blizard, in the Fighting 28th. Sergeant Blizard is spending fourteen days leave with his mother, Mrs. E. C. Blizard, 16 Hanover street. Friends will be glad to hear of his safe return home from overseas.
