MRS. HETTY GREEN

Birthday Chat With the Richest Woman in the World

KNOWS NOT EXTENT OF WEALTH

Promises a Balancing of Books at New Year — Talks of Her Life, Her Religious Views and Women's Position

The New York Herald, published an interview with Mrs. Hetty Green, "the world's richest woman," on her 78th birthday. In part the Herald said:—

Colonel Edward H. R. Green, a strapping robust man in the prime of health, rode to his office yesterday in a high powered limousine automobile with soft cushions, while he let his poor, aged mother, Mrs. Hetty Green, walk. However, since a man who needed $10,000 happened to select Mrs. Green's automobile to run on, him she has been a little skittish about "these new fangled things."

"You certainly are looking fine for a woman of seventy-seven years," said a reporter for the Herald who called upon her yesterday to inquire how she would celebrate the anniversary of her birthday. "I'm not seventy-seven," quickly said that most remarkable of women, placing her hand on the reporter's arm, "I'll be seventy-eight to-morrow." She asked credit for overcoming a feminine frailty in admitting her right age.

"Pardon this union I'm chewing," she continued, "but it's the finest thing in the world for health. Perhaps that's why I live so long. I had a big tenderloin steak for breakfast, with fried potatoes, a pot of tea and the top of a bottle of milk. I don't buy cream because it is twelve hours older than the milk. I just take off the top of the bottle of milk, set the rest in a cool place and use it for cooking."

"Is there anything besides cotton that keeps you in such fine health?"

"Well, I walk all I can. But, lawyers, you should have seen me before I got poisoned up at the Chemical National Bank. Since then I haven't been high. I was there at my office to collect three million nine hundred dollars that was due on a certain day, so I stayed a lot of papers to be signed, so I stayed to luncheon."

Thought She Was Going to Die
"Well, there was about a dozen others at the table, set in the directors' room, and the funniest thing was that no one else but me was taken sick. I thought I was going to die. They called me a saint and said I had no fever but a terrible inflammation, and he said I probably had pneumonia poisoning. But I collected the money all right, and since then I have not made my office at the Chemical National Bank."

"I just started this office down here to please Eddie. He's such a boy! He wanted to leave Texas and come up here and be with his dear old mother."

Mrs. Green was then referring to the office of the Westminister company, into which she had invited the Herald reporter. This company collects all the interest on Mrs. Green's vast holdings, and when she arrived there yesterday morning her chief clerk had a pile of bonds a foot high, which she took to the bank and sold.

"Eddie has just come back from a trip," explained Mrs. Green, "and there is a lot of work to do. He says he indicates the pile of bonds. Just then 'Eddie' thrust his two hundred and sixty pounds into the room and said, perhaps petulantly:—

"I'm in a hurry, Mom. You know we can't hinder the wheels of progress with interviews."

"How much are you worth now?" Mrs. Green was asked.
"I haven't the least idea," she said very frankly. She left little doubt as to the truth of her statement.
"Can it be $10,000,000, $27,000,000 or $100,000,000?"

"I'm an old Quaker, and when I say I don't know what I am worth I mean that. You see, if I sell a piece of property in Chicago for $300,000 I keep the money on deposit in the bank there. If I sell bonds in St. Louis for $500,000 I keep the money with the bankers there. In that way the banks help me to dispose of what I don't want."

"Is there no way in which you can arrive at an approximate value of your wealth?"

"Yes," I could take stock of what I have."
"Will you do that, or do you intend doing so?"

"I had not intended doing so, but if you want me to I will," Mrs. Green said. "I draw but, covered with black silk lace, which she has worn many years, tottered to the door."

back and forth on her head as she called for her son. When Colonel Edward H. R. She Still is a Quaker
"You know, my Daddy was a Quaker, and he brought me up as a Quaker. He told me that I had to go to church with him on Sunday morning, and that on Sunday afternoon and evenings I could look for a better religion, but I haven't found any better."

"The fact that you are living in Countess Leary's house is not an indication that you may embrace the Catholic religion," she was asked.

"Let's not talk about religion," she replied. "I once held twenty-eight mortgages on Catholic churches at two per cent interest, placed through Countess Leary, and I can see any church any good and am happy. All the churches are good. Why I had a mortgage for $27,000 on a Presbyterian church in Chicago, and when I turned down the pastor wrote to me that unless I cancelled the mortgage I would not go to heaven. I wrote right back to him that as long as he was in a threatening mood he better climb up on his corner stone and pray for my soul, because I was going to foreclose within sixty days, and I did."

"I joined the Episcopal church because I used to go down to Trinity church when I was a girl and even now I drop in there occasionally to hear the organ recitals."

"My residence with the Countess Leary has no religious significance. It means nothing that I know of. I'm arranging now to return to my cold water flat in Hoboken. That was my happiest home. You know the Stevens family own that property, and they are very respectable. I paid $24 a month for the flat there and I was very happy."

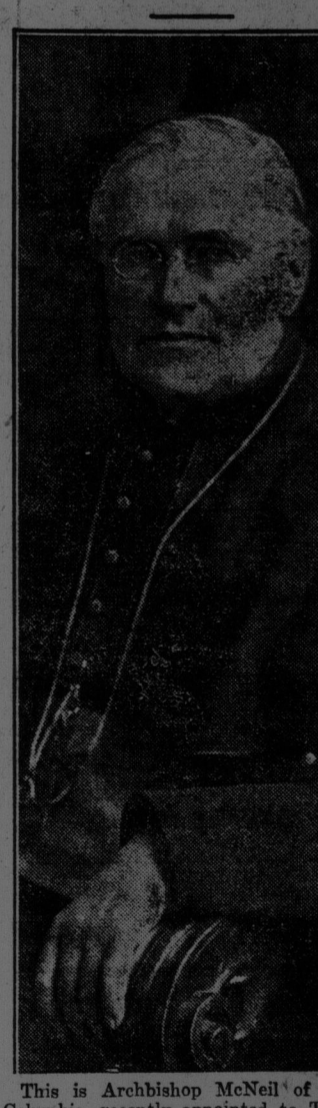

"Yes, as I was saying," Mrs. Green continued, "I can cook my own meals there without causing comment and do my own marketing. A woman can't run her house properly unless she does her own marketing. I don't think very much of this suffrage matter. I always believed with my daddy that a woman's place was in the home, of course, my case was different—and a woman should be married and have a family. Let the man do the voting and make the money and let the woman keep house and do the cooking. If a woman will feed a man properly she will get all she wants. Just give him enough to eat and woman's woes will pass."

PILGRIM'S PROGRESS TODAY

Today is the last opportunity of witnessing "The Pilgrim's Progress" as presented at the Opera House in pictures. This subject has proven a magnet for the masses as well as the classes. Leslie Grossmith, the humorist and pianist, may be said to be the only entertainer of his kind St. John has seen in a decade. He was accorded a big reception at last evening's performance; three shows daily at three p. m., 7.15 p. m., and 8.45 p. m.

The management announces another big film feature "The vengeance of Egypt," for Thursday, Friday and Saturday. This elaborate drama of Egypt is presented in three reels of film each of which is artistically colored throughout. The production is made on a massive scale and is in the front rank among the big picture features of the year.

SENATE OF THE U. N. B.

Fredericton, N. B., Nov. 26.—The annual session of the senate of the University of New Brunswick was concluded here this afternoon, when a conference was held in the Arts building with the various professors.

Six hundred dollars was voted for instruments and equipment. The greater part of this amount is to be expended in the departments of civil, electrical and mechanical engineering.

The senate also discussed the matter of leases of university lands. The opinion was expressed that sufficient revenue was not being obtained from the properties of the college, which are under lease. A committee composed of Judge Barry and Dr. W. C. Crockett of Fredericton, was appointed to consider the matter.

The financial reports showed an expenditure of $20,000 and a surplus of $1,500 which will be more than taken up by salary increases. Dr. A. Pierre Crockett of St. John offered at least $100 a year for five years to be completed for by the freshman class in Latin and Greek. The offer was accepted.

Dr. Jones made his annual report and was authorized to secure the services of three outside lecturers to give lectures during the year before the engineering students.
