

Come Evening, once again, season of peace;
Return sweet evening and continue long.
Methinks I see thee in the streaky west,
With matron step slow moving, while the night
Treads on thy sweeping train; one hand employed
In letting fall the curtain of repose
On bird and beast—the other charged for man
With sweet oblivion of the cares of day.

MAXIM.—Who cuts is easily wounded. The readier you are to offend, the sooner you are offended.

The Piper and the Parson.—A jolly dame who, not 'sixty year sine,' kept the principal caravensary at Greenlaw, in Berwickshire, had the honour to receive under her roof a very worthy clergyman, with three sons of the same profession, each having a cure of souls; but, said in passing, none of the reverend party were powerful in the pulpit. After dinner was over, the worthy senior, in the pride of his heart asked Mrs. Buchan whether she ever had such a party in her house before. "Here sit I," he said, "a placed minister of the Kirk of Scotland, and here sit my three sons, each a placed minister of the same kirk. Confess, Luckie Buchan, you never had such a party in your house before." The question was not premised by any invitation to sit down and take a glass of wine or the like, so Mrs. B. answered drily, "Indeed sir I cannot just say that ever I had such a party in my house before, except once in the forty five, when I had a Highland piper here, and his three sons; all Highland pipers, and d. il a spring could they play among them!"—Notes to the New Edition of the Waterly Noctes.
