

PRICKING A BUBBLE.

Police Magistrate Hall, Mr. J. P. Walls and the Colonel have exploded their squibs, the effluvia that was evidently raised for a purpose has been dissipated by later explanations, and the civic atmosphere will now settle down into its accustomed serenity, we suppose. Our morning contemporary, it is true, renews its demand for an investigation, but it is evident the fourth page, as usual, is at least a day behind the first page in knowledge of events, and it is not likely the demand will be regarded seriously. If the editor had known that Mr. Walls's explanation carried the sensation back to 1901, that the lawyer's proffered fee had been reduced from two thousand to two hundred dollars, and that the arrangement which has been so severely condemned had been continued under another civic regime, he might have considered it expedient to modify his remarks.

We do not know whether Mr. McCandless will or will not consider it necessary now that all the facts are known to reiterate his demand for an investigation. We are quite sure that as far as the public is concerned there never was any doubt as to the rectitude of his conduct as chief magistrate of the city. The unfortunate and ill-considered remarks of the Police Magistrate, the attempt on the part of our contemporary to make a sensation out of the affair, and the general inaccuracy of its reports created an impression on the public mind that there was a scandal in connection with the late civic administration. The summary manner in which the whole matter has been cleared up by the explanations we have published indicates how necessary it is for men in responsible public positions to carefully weigh their words, to be exceedingly guarded lest the spirit of vindictiveness gain the mastery over the judicial spirit, and for newspapers to make sensationalism secondary to accuracy.

BOUNDING ALONG.

Away east on the Atlantic coast it is reported that as many as four thousand emigrants have arrived in Canada in one week, emigrants who are just as good settlers because they are better acquainted with the conditions they will be called upon to face in crossing the border from the south in probably larger numbers, while back in the wilderness this multitude will make blossom like a rose before another year shall pass away twenty-six new post offices have been opened up in the course of one week. That is the manner in which Canada is filling up at present. When the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway is under operation and has made accessible and provided transportation facilities into a range of territory as large again as that now available, the rate of the country's growth in population will be more than doubled. The census of the present decade will show the greatest increase in wealth that has yet been recorded in the history of the Dominion, but at the same time we shall but be at the threshold of our career as a nation.

The opposition at Ottawa is strong in its criticism of the policy of the government towards the Grand Trunk Pacific Road. It reiterates its opinion that the charges upon the country as a whole will be greater than can be justified before the people. And yet competent men are of the opinion that the government will never be called upon to meet its guarantee of the interest on the bonds of the western sections. Under the terms of the agreement the company must honor all its obligations to the people of Canada before dividends can be paid to the shareholders. This is the feature that makes financial authorities who have but an imperfect knowledge of the activities in the Canadian Dominion at the present time exceedingly dubious as to the result. Mr. Hays has investigated the situation, he has discounted the possibilities, and has no doubts whatever as to the success of the undertaking. We must assume that a man with such a reputation as the manager of the Grand Trunk, a reputation that would be absolutely ruined if he were proven to be mistaken in his judgment—we must assume that Mr. Hays is better acquainted with the situation than the opposition critics and that the Dominion administration will not be called upon to meet the guarantees for the two western divisions.

There but remains the eastern section of the line. That will be constructed by the government and will for all time remain the property of the people. As an asset it will constantly increase in value. Not only will it become a great artery from which population will flow to irrigate a rich territory all the way from the Atlantic to the West. It will be one of the main channels of communication with the Northwest and the West. It will be the shortest line of communication with the coast and with the Orient. Competent authorities have expressed the opinion that the Pacific must in the course of a very short time become the centre of all things. And yet the opposition professes to be pessimistic in regard to the advisability of proceeding with the Grand Trunk Pacific. That project is but the beginning of Canadian development. Before it is completed greater and more important works will be in contemplation as necessary to the symmetrical advancement of all sections of the country. In side of ten years there will be a demand for five times twenty-six new post offices in Canada every month.

A BRAVE SAILOR'S DEATH.

The period of comparative quiet in the East has been succeeded by startling events. The fighting has been general upon land and sea. The advantage, as usual, appears to lie with the Japanese, but the actual results will hardly be known for a time.

There has been considerable jeering in the press at what was thought to be the boasting of Admiral Makarov. It is not usual for officers in high command to announce their intentions in vaunting speech. Possibly we do not understand the Russian army and navy have boasted quite valiantly of what they were going to do when the opportunity arrived. The Admiral has had his turn, and it must be confessed that he made a valiant attempt to fight up to his boasts. Whether he fought wisely and died in an attempt that will increase his fame as a great captain remains to be proven. But there is now no doubt that Makarov was an intrepid soldier, that he was willing to take great chances in order to overcome the advantage his enemy had gained in the first battles of the war, and that the regret because of his death will be universal.

FRANK AND TRUE.

When politicians adopt a certain attitude from a sense of duty to party rather than from inward intellectual conviction, it is absolutely necessary that they shall keep a strict guard upon their utterances, or something will surely slip out that may be used to confound them. Especially is this the case in respect to the newspaper man who is called upon from day to day to deal with "burning political questions."

A few days ago the Colonist stated in a dispatch from its Ottawa correspondent that there is no real opposition in the House of Commons to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. This statement may be taken to mean that the Conservative party is acting against its convictions under a sense of political expediency, and that the members acknowledge in their hearts that it would be a calamity for the country if their efforts to kill the undertaking were successful. Therefore they have no real desire to succeed, and when Mr. Taylor says the party if successful in the coming elections will veto the contract he is virtually confessing that he has no hopes of success, because even if he were speaking with authority it would be an unheard-of thing for this or any other constitutionally governed country to repudiate obligations assumed by Parliament.

But this is not the only instance we have been confronted with of late of the insincere position into which the majority of the members of the Conservative party have been forced by the conditions brought about through the policy of the present Dominion administration. The Colonist this morning in referring to the agitation in the United States for reciprocity with Canada, and in undertaking to refute the statement that the competition of this country could have no more serious effect upon the markets of the states as a whole than the competition from any individual state has, said: "With competitors from another state in the United States is not so serious as it is with Canadians, because the former are under the same fiscal conditions, while the Canadian lives under another and much more favorable fiscal dispensation."

This may be an inadvertent or it may be a deliberately expressed tribute to the policy of the present Dominion government. It may be that our contemporary is too independent to keep up the hypocritical pretence of such papers as the Montreal Star or the Times and Mail and Empire that there can be no real or permanent prosperity in this country until we adopt a fiscal system cast upon the same scale as that of the United States. The facts are before us all. We are living in the most prosperous country in the world. No tariff that could be devised could possibly improve the situation. There is the fact to prove the superiority of our system that two very important manufacturing concerns in the United States have established branches in Canada because from such a base they will be able to compete more effectively in foreign markets. They produce articles that are in the greatest demand at the present time—locomotives and agricultural machinery. They will employ thousands of men. The facts establish the wisdom with which our policy has been framed. They also establish a case that will have a strong effect upon the electorate when laid before them. There is little to indicate that we are suffering on account of the "dumping" propensities of our neighbors or that the tariff could be improved upon by those who ask the privilege of being permitted to give us "adequate protection." It would be a dangerous thing for a country in such a position as Canada is in to-day, in such a condition as she promises to remain in for years; it would be an unheard-of thing for a people who are surrounded on all sides with unbounded prosperity, to make any rash fiscal experiments. It is interesting at this time to have a frank acknowledgment from the Colonist that the "Canadian lives under another and much more favorable fiscal dispensation."

It is related that Rev. Daniel Abner invoked the Divine blessing upon the Texas Republican Convention, by praying: "One favor, O Lord, we must ask of Thee is that you don't let your party be defeated this year." The effect of this petition will probably be offset by the invocations of the Hearst string of newspapers after their proprietor gets the Democratic nomination. Then the task of the celestial host will be no sinecure.

John Houston, M. P. P., governor-in-general of the province of Nelson, is in the city. It is said the member is down to bid an affectionate farewell to his friend Premier McBride before taking up his permanent abode in the rising city of Edmonton. It is also said that John Houston is as likely to leave British Columbia as Premier McBride is to hold a summer session of the Legislature. The one simply could not exist outside of the bounds of this province; the other is too anxious to produce his puzzle to Premier to place himself in the hands of a company of doubtful loyalty. There is always a possibility that the Socialists might not be strong enough to save him.

The Methodists, the Presbyterians and the Congregationalists in the East are agitating for a union of church forces. In several of the large centres the fathers have come together and passed resolutions in favor of the movement. We have not heard of a word of protest being raised. In fact, the agitators for union are the very men who a dozen years ago would probably have been the most vehement protesters. Therefore there appears to be no doubt that the scheme will carry, and that within a very few years. The advantages that will be gained are so obvious that it is not necessary to comment on them. Already in many of the new districts of the Dominion the representatives of the bodies are acting in concert in order to avoid needless dissipation of energy and waste of resources. The colored philosopher is right. The world do move. Every day it accelerates its pace. The present generation may not pass away ere more important unions shall be consummated. The Gulf that separated Methodists from Presbyterians twenty years ago was perhaps quite as broad as the tide that flows between the opinions of some of the great religious bodies that will continue to remain in a state of isolation.

G. RILEY, M. P., THANKED.
Board of Trade Appreciates Services of Local Member—Council Met Wednesday Morning.
A well attended meeting of the council Wednesday for the purpose of receiving all of the board of trade was held on report of a committee appointed to consider changes to the constitution. This was received and approved. It will be referred to the board at the next regular meeting.
The following letter addressed to Geo. Riley, M. P., was submitted and heartily endorsed:
March 30th, 1904.
Geo. Riley, Esq., M. P., House of Commons, Ottawa:
Dear Sir:—At a meeting of the council of this Board of Trade held to-day the telegrams sent you regarding the proposed bill and approved. The council, when instructing me to transmit this confirmation, desired to express to you the board's high appreciation of your good offices and the president stated that from advice he had received from Ottawa he is satisfied that the granting of salmon trap licenses is due to the firm stand taken by you. The council feels that in voting you the board's best thanks it hardly conveys the full appreciation of the high estimate it places upon the services which you have rendered in this connection.
Yours faithfully,
F. ELWORTHY, Secretary.

Returned To Day on Queen City—Found No Conclusive Evidence of Lamorna's Loss.

E. W. Wright, an editorial writer on the Portland Oregonian, was a passenger returning from the West Coast on the steamer Queen City on Wednesday. Mr. Wright made the round trip on ship and investigated the wreckage recently found in Barkley Sound.
Speaking of this, he said that he found no conclusive evidence of the loss of the Lamorna, but there was no doubt in his mind but that she was dashed to pieces on Starlight reef. There were a couple of boats, and Mr. Wright saw sections of the deck, the coaming surrounding one of the masts of some large ship, a brass door knob and other bits, pointing beyond all doubt to the fact that a sailing vessel had been wrecked. The talk of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was the general opinion of the Japanese that the visit of the Marquis de la Roche in March was also referred to by Mr. Shimura, who contended that this trip was one of great importance. It had brought about the much desired friendship between Korea and Japan. His opinion was that there would be no interference from the former during the progress of the war. It was