SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

[FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.] Through the enterprise of Miss Jessie C. Whitlock, the Band of Hope enjoyed a sleigh ride on Saturday, the 8th inst., in which 150 children participated. Teams were provided by the following gentlemen: Messrs. J. T. Whitlock & Co., Hardy & Bridges, F. M. Murchie, Frank Todd, C. H. Clarke, Henry Eastman, Dr. Todd, C. N. Vroom and W. F. Todd.

The concert given by the Band of Hope, Tuesday evening, was a decided success, in regard to the rendering of the programme, as well as the receipts, which amounted to about $20. The recitations, duets, solos and choruses by the children showed evidence of careful training, and reflected credit upon the ladies in charge.

How to Wear Corsets.

Says a woman of fashion: "The woman who dresses well today never goes without her corsets. The dress reformers or the dowdies may find disadvantages in them, but the woman who understands the art of dressing and knows a good corset when she sees it will not be in the least likely to cast it aside under any gown except the one worn at night."

DIGBY, N. S.

[Progress is for sale in Digby at Mrs. Morse's.] MARCH 7.—Mr. and Mrs. Munroe have arrived home from a trip to Boston and Montreal.

Mrs. Campbell, of St. John, has been visiting at Topik Rectory, but was called back very suddenly on account of her mother's death on Saturday.

Our people did not represent Digby largely at the carnival at Annapolis on Monday night. I think a party of four went up; the others are keeping Lent.

Miss Edith Ambrose has arrived home from Boston via St. John.

Mr. Brad Jones, of Boston, is home on a short visit.

Mr. John Cleveland has returned from Halifax, where he has been for several weeks.

ONE OF HIS OFF DAYS.

The Millionaire not Anxious for Gas when his Spree was Ended.

Money was no object to him. He had plenty. He owned a beautiful place on the other side of the bay. He had a vineyard, an orchard, stables and all sorts of luxuries. On day a few weeks ago he got upon a little spree, as millionaires will, and it dawned upon him when he was at his liveliest that he wanted to put gas on his place. He went up to the plumber's.

"I want gas," he said, "gas. Send a man over to my place to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock and I'll show him what I want."

He kept up his little spree, so that when the plumber's man met him next morning he was still lively.

"Yes," he said, "I want gas. Gas here all over this garden, and I want the finest gasaliers you've got put up in this stable, and then I want you to lay pipes all over this vineyard, and put up lamp posts, because sometimes I want to come down here in the middle of the night and see the vines grow. Gas—gas."

The plumber looked around and measured things. "That will take 16,000 feet of pipe," he said.

"Don't care; 16,000,000 feet gas; I want gas everywhere."

"All right," and the gasman measured all over and went away. "I'll be down Tuesday," he said.

Tuesday came; the millionaire was lounging through his orchard when a man appeared before him.

"Good morning," said the man.

"Good morning," said the millionaire, dubiously.

"I've come to put that gas in for you."

"Oh, yes—of course—gas," said the millionaire, but he showed very clearly he did not quite understand. However, he looked up the road and saw a team coming down.

"What's that team?" he asked.

"That's 6,000 feet of the pipe. There will be 10,000 feet more this afternoon."

"That will be all right."

The millionaire took his hat and mopped his brow.

"Say, come into the house and take a drink."

They walked into the house. The millionaire took the man into the dining room, closed all the doors, shut all the windows, and when he had filled a glass of whiskey, he said:

"Say, what is all this gas business, anyway?"

"Why, don't you remember you ordered gas to be put in the stable and the orchard and all over the grounds—16,000 feet of pipe?"

"Great Scott! When did I order all this?"

"Saturday morning."

"Saturday! Say, old man, rats? Don't say any more about it. Saturday was an off day with me. All I want is a couple of gas jets in my stable. Send that—pipe back, and I'll make it worth your while to say nothing."—San Francisco Chronicle.

A New Fountain Pen.

The rubber fountain pen is one of the American Rubber Store's attractions this week. They tell about it in their usual space. The price is 50 cents, and it is a small sum to pay for so much convenience and usefulness.
