Nursery Rhymes, No. 14.

JIM BOGBean.

Jim BogBean, on a summer morn,
Rose from his bunk, haggard and worn.
Beneath his straw hat there peered an eye,
And his empty stomach grew fussy and dry.
He whistled a tune with a vague unrest,
And a tear coursed down his yellow-called vest.
He looked out on the open street,
And he sought in vain for a man to treat.
Some one came, but his pallid cheek
Told the playful story he couldn't repeat.
He leaned his frame against a friendly porch,
And his feet—his shoes like a wall in torch.
Oh! how he longed for the moon's bright glow,
And watched the Policemen come and go.
For of all sad words 'er writ in a book,
The saddest are, "by a seaman's look."
With a shuffling gait Jim sauntered along,
Humming a bar of a popular song.
His halloo great faint and his breath got shorter,
When he halted in front of a pestle and mortar.
And his lips turned white, and he shivered with
An ill-modesty asked for a couple of pills.
He looked as well as an ear hard bodied,
And he thought of his garments sooty and soiled.
Then he threw his pipe and his cap away,
And "I" went on a "ke" for a year and a day.
The eye shot down in a golden beam,
For Jim BogBean, dear, only "SODA and CRAM."
