Loder pushed back the scattered papers that lay under his arm.

"Only a lunatic would propose such a scheme," he said brusquely and without feeling.

"Why?"

The other's lips parted for a quick retort; then in a surprising way the retort seemed to fall him. "Oh, because the thing isn't feasible, isn't practicable from any point of view?"

Chilcote stepped closer. "Why?" he insisted.

"Because it couldn't work, man—couldn't hold for a dozen hours!"

Chilcote put out his hand and touched his arm. "But why?" he urged. "Why? Give me one unanswerable reason."

Loder shook off the hand and laughed, but below his laugh lay a suggestion of the other's excitement. Again the scene stirred him against his sounder judgment, though his reply when it came was sound enough.

"As for reasons," he said, "there are a hundred, if I had time to name them. Take it, for the sake of supposition, that I were to accept your offer. I should take my place in your house at—let us say at dinner time. Your man gets me into your evening clothes, and there at the very start you have the first suspicion set up. He has probably known you for years, known you until every furm of your appearance, voice and manner is far more familiar to him than it is to you. There are no eyes like a servant's."

"I have thought of that. My servant and my secretary can both be changed. I will do the thing thoroughly."

Loder glanced at him in surprise. The madness had more method than he had believed. Then as he still looked at a fresh idea struck him, and he laughed.

"You have entirely forgotten one thing," he said. "You can hardly dismiss your wife."

"My wife doesn't count."

Again Loder laughed. "I'm afraid I scarcely agree. The complications would be slightly—slightly—" He paused.

Chilcote's latent irritability broke out suddenly. "Look here," he said. "This isn't a chaffing matter. It may be moonshine to you, but it's reality to me."

Again Loder took his face between his hands.

"Don't ridicule the idea. I'm in dead earnest."

Loder said nothing.

"Think—think it over before you refuse."

For a moment Loder remained motionless, then he rose suddenly, pushing back his chair.

"Tush, man! You don't know what you say. The fact of your being married bars it. Can't you see that?"

Again Chilcote caught his arm.

"You misunderstand," he said. "You mistake the position. I tell you my wife and I are nothing to each other. She goes her way; I go mine. We have our own friends, our own rooms. Marriage, actual marriage, doesn't enter the question. We meet occasionally at meals and at other people's houses; sometimes we go out together for the sake of appearance; beyond that, nothing. If you take up my life nobody in it will trouble you less than I will—and I can promise that." He laughed unsteadily.

Loder's face remained unmoved.

"Even granting that," he said, "the thing is still impossible."

"Why?"

"There is the house. The position there would be untenable. A man is known there as he is known in his own club." He drew away from Chilcote's touch.

"Very possibly. Very possibly," Chilcote laughed quickly and excitedly.

"But what club is without its eccentric member? I am glad you spoke of that. I am glad you raised that point. It was a long time ago that I hit upon a reputation for moods as a shield—for other things, and the more useful it has become the more I have let it grow. I tell you you might go down to the house tomorrow and spend the whole day without speaking to, even nodding to, a single man, and as long as you were I to outward appearances no one would raise an eyebrow. In the same way you might vote in my place, ask a question, make a speech if you wanted to."

At the word speech Loder turned involuntarily. For a fleeting second the coldness of his manner dropped and his face changed.

Chilcote, with his nervous quickness of perception, saw the alteration, and a new look crossed his own face.

"Why not?" he said quickly. "You once had ambitions in that direction. Why not renew the ambitions?"

"And drop back from the mountains into the gutter?" Loder smiled and slowly shook his head.

"Better to live for one day than to exist for a hundred!" Chilcote's voice trembled with anxiety. For the third time he extended his hand and touched the other.

"This time Loder did not shake off the detaining hand. He scarcely seemed to feel its pressure.

"Look here," Chilcote's fingers tightened. "A little while ago you talked of influence. Here you can step into a position built by influence. You might do, all you once hoped to do."

GOLF

Those Remaining in a Shield Competition.

The opening day for the regular course, took place Saturday afternoon. The greens were in excellent shape and reflected great credit on Mr. Hea. Good scores were almost impossible in consequence of the wind which blew half a gale. Under these conditions Mr. Schell's 86 for the 18 holes was remarkably good golf.

The following players qualified for the 18 hole round and will play off in this order: Towers v. Brewster; Bunnell v. Popplewell, Waterous v. Large, Webbing v. Yates, Champion v. Sheppard, Schell v. Rose, A. E. Watts v. Orr, Ellis v. McKay.

The first round must be played off by Monday, May 17th, the second round Monday, May 24th, and finals by May 31st.

With the City Police

Wm. McMeans was found guilty of supplying Edgerton Carpenter, an Indian, with liquor, at the police court this morning and fined $50 and costs with an alternative of three months in jail. He will take imprisonment. Carpenter was fined $5 for being under the fire water. Hiram Hill, another of the same ilk, was similarly fined for a similar offence.

Hugh Mitchell charged James Winters with the theft of a piece of saddle and dependent pleaded that he was drunk and did not intend to steal. He was allowed to go as his record was clean.

Mrs. McNicholl having recovered from her indisposition was charged with arson, but the case was adjourned for a week and no evidence taken.

At the instance of Dr. Pearson, Mrs. McGinnis was charged with a breach of the Health Act. This she vigorously denied, and the charge was enlarged until Wednesday.

Thomas Hunter's horses wandered on the meadows of Robert Good in the county, and a police court case resulted, which was withdrawn as the parties themselves had settled their differences.

Albert Wickett, Alev McAdam, Angelo Scott and Albert Campbell, each paid the penalty for riding on the sidewalk.

Benjamin Backrack settled up with John Chickackian who got after him for non-payment of wages and the case was this morning struck off the roll.

Church Notes

IMMANUEL CHURCH
At Immanuel Church yesterday the services were of a memorial, and reflecting characters being woven round the theme of "motherhood." It was Mother's Day, and the church decorated in honor of motherhood, was lovely with white flowers and blossom branches.

The services were taken by the Rev. J. Loney of the pastorate, and the earnest, eloquent appeal he made while preaching from the text, "Now take this child and make it for me, and I will give thee wages," left an impression that can never be erased.

Responsibility is the keynote of a woman's life; responsibility for the asset she possesses as a divine combination in the scheme of life, a part higher and nobler than any other service under heaven.

At the evening service, the subject for discussion was a "Godly Mother" and on Elizabeth, mother of John the Baptist, the preacher based his ideal of all a mother might be.

Not only the culture of colleges, on the patriotism of men, the thinkers and students of the world was based the safeguard of sacred ideals; alone they rested on Christian motherhood.

After prayer for the Empire in her hour of trial, and for those sons who are dying for honor, the inviolate prerogative of motherhood, the day was closed by splendid singing by a group of young girls from the Sunday school of "Where is my boy to-night" and six candidates for baptism were received into the church.
