Literary Notes

Recent Poems by Canadians

THE New York magazines for April contain a fair share of poems by writers who are natives of the Land of the Maple. In "Scribner's" Mr. Duncan Campbell Scott has a sonnet which bears the title, "In Snow-Time," with a highly artistic illustrative setting by Mr. Henry McCarter.

"I have seen things that charmed the heart to rest;
Faint moonlight on the towers of ancient towns,
Flattering the soul to dream of old renowns;

The first clear silver on the mountain crest

Where the lone eagle by his chilly nest
Called the lone soul to brood serenely free;

Still pools of sunlight shimmering in the sea,
Calm after storm, wherein the storm seemed blest,

But here a peace deeper than peace is furled,

Enshrined and chalice from the changeable hour,

The snow is still, yet lives in its own light.

Here is the peace which brooded day and night,

Before the heart of man with its wild power

Had ever spurned or trampled the great world."

Mr. Arthur Stringer has recently turned his poetic attention to Irish character and has produced two poems which are pleasingly tuneful. "The Good Man" is not exactly a happy title for the following:

I

Mackillray was a dour man,

Workin' night and day,

Thryin' to build a grand house,

And frettin' life away.

When he'd built his foine house,

High beyont the furze,

Not a girl in Kildare

Sought to make it hers!

II

Larry was a young de'il,

Idlin' youth away,

A-pipin' and philanderin'

And laughin' all the day.

Never was a colleen

Trod the Kildare sod

But homeless would have fared forth

At homeless Larry's nod!

Major Richardson, the author of "Wacousta," the Indian novel, of which a new edition appeared last year, found literary work in the Canada of the first half of the Nineteenth Century a thankless toil.

One wish he asked to be respected by future generations of his countrymen. "I cannot deny to myself the gratification of the expression of a hope that should a more refined and cultivated taste ever be introduced into this matter-of-fact country in which I have derived my living, its people will decline to do me the honour of placing my name in the list of their Authors. I certainly have no particular ambition to rank among their future 'men of genius,' or to share any posthumous honour they may be disposed to confer upon them."
