

Most Sheridan grads get jobs

A survey conducted by Sheridan College shows that 85 per cent of those in the 1976 graduating class who went looking for jobs found them. The survey, part of a 126-page placement report released by the student services department says that 79 per cent of the 1976 graduating class tried to find jobs. Of these, 69 per cent found jobs related to their program of study at Sheridan; 16 per cent are working in jobs unrelated to their studies; and 15 per cent are still seeking employment. The remaining 21 per cent not on the job market consists of students who are either continuing their education or who are not looking for work for personal reasons such as travel. The survey of 1,137 students or 93 per cent of the graduating class was conducted last summer and is the fourth such study prepared by the college to determine just what happens to Sheridan graduates.

BBB seeking help

The Better Business Bureau (BBB), as part of its continuing efforts to promote better consumer relations, needs help in distributing its directory. The directory, which is a guide for consumers, indexes over 5,000 Greater Toronto firms in more than 200 categories. All of the firms in the directory meet the bureau's standards. The bureau expects to distribute 50,000 copies of the directory this year. It is asking for distribution help from community groups, ratepayer associations and church groups, among others. "The directories are free and we want to have them in the hands of the people for whom they were intended, the consumers," says Paul J. Tuz, BBB executive vice-president. Tuz hopes most of the directories will reach businesses and consumers early in the year. Groups interested in distributing the directory call the bureau at 961-0237 to arrange for pick-up. You can obtain a copy of the directory by sending $1 for mailing and handling or you can pick up a copy free at the bureau, 321 Bloor St. E., Toronto.

Teachers to vote on contract

A tentative contract settlement between the Dufferin Peel Separate School Board and its 1,000 teachers will be voted on by teachers at a general meeting tonight. Terms of the agreement, which will cover the 1976-77 school year, were not disclosed. The last contract expired in August. The negotiations have been under the direction of James Singleton, mediator, since late November with the tentative agreement being reached on Dec. 22.

Education board announces appointments

Paul C. Statler has been hired as director of personnel in one of three appointments announced by Peel Board of Education. Statler, formerly a vice-president of personnel and a member of the management committee for the T. Eaton Co., will supervise the board's personnel department. The board employs 5,600, including teachers, administrators, clerical staff and maintenance personnel. Statler is a member and past president of the employee relations committee of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and a member of the employee relations committee of the Board of Trade of Metropolitan Toronto. Another former Eaton's executive, Robert Hasler, has been appointed director of administrative services. Hasler who was with Eaton's for 10 years, will be responsible for the computer services department, the operation of cafeterias and various office services. Hasler is a graduate of the Royal Military College and has a master's degree in business administration from the University of Western Ontario. Al Yarnell, formerly the budget officer in the board's finance department, has been promoted to internal auditor. Yarnell will be responsible for seeing that the controls of the board's financial system work effectively and that the operation of the board is consistent with approved policies.

No move to buy Manville land

A conveyer being built from the Cookville Creek from the Canadian Admiral plant to Johns Manville Co. does not necessarily mean that Admiral is going to buy the neighboring property says a spokesman for Admiral. John Sandford, president of the Lakeview Admiral plant at 501 Lakeshore Rd. E., said Monday that "at this stage there are no arrangements at all. There's no agreement yet." He chose not to comment further. Told about an explanation from Manville that the conveyer system was being installed so that Admiral can use excess manufacturing space on the Manville property, Sandford replied, "That's probably a good enough definition" of what is occurring. Last week the Credit Valley Conservation Authority executive committee approved the construction of the conveyer system, providing it is at least 18 feet above the creek and no structure is on the land the authority owns in the flood plain. In presenting the application, a staff spokesman told the committee that Admiral was going to purchase the Manville property, but the deal hinged on Admiral's being able to get the conveyer access to the land. Tom Patterson, a spokesman for Johns Manville, said rumors of a purchase had been heard quite awhile ago, but nothing has been mentioned recently. After doing some checking, he said the conveyer was merely so that Admiral could use excess warehouse space on the Manville property for storage of manufactured goods.

Drop-in centre to open on Friday

Malton's first drop-in centre for young people will open this Friday. The centre, in the Malton Hall on Victory Crescent, is made possible by a Local Initiatives Program grant to the Malton Community Services volunteer group in December. The LIP project, which will run for 30 weeks, is designed primarily "to get some programs going for youth," says Raj Chopra a worker hired with part of the grant money. There will be a dance at the centre on Friday, but Ms. Chopra says that in the following weeks the young people using the centre can organize their own activities. "This is going to be a very unstructured type of get-together," she says. Part of the purpose of the program is also to provide an understanding between the various ethnic communities in Malton. Throughout January, the drop-ins will be held Friday nights at the old Malton Hall. In February, the activities could be moved to the city's new $6 million community centre. "We'll have to wait and see how everything goes," says Ms. Chopra. Malton Community Services was one of three city community groups to be awarded LIP grants recently.

For more information about the drop-in centre, call 677-3400.

Interchange plans to be on display

Proposals for the interchange at Winston Churchill Boulevard and the Queen Elizabeth Way will be on public display Jan. 11 and 12 at Clarkson secondary school. The interchange, expected to take considerable pressure off the congested Erin Mills Parkway-Southdown Road traffic circle, could be started in 1978. Development of the Clearview community in Oakville on the west side of Winston Churchill Boulevard has been held up pending construction of the interchange.

Representatives of the Ontario Ministry of Transportation and Communications will be at Clarkson to explain drawings and answer questions.

Interested residents should go to the cafeteria of the Bromsgrove Road school between 7 and 9 p.m. on Jan. 11 and 12.
